TO THE ELECTORS OF LIVERPOOL PLAINS.—

GENTLEMEN,—To those amongst you who recorded votes in my favour, I beg to express my sincere thanks. Though I have not been returned as your member, I am in a position which is satisfactory to any person of an honourable mind.

I sought your suffrages in aid of those political principles which I have hitherto consistently advocated, and which have formerly met your approval; and I have not entertained so poor an opinion of your independence and self-respect as to expect any support which your accordance with those principles would not induce you to give.

The ballot has been fairly trusted to by me and by my friends. I was under an engagement to offer my services to you, and I offered them accordingly, as, indeed, I was last year requested to do so by many electors, who have on the present occasion opposed me. It is gratifying to me to reflect that throughout the contest just closed, none of my opponents have condemned any portion of the Legislative career during which I served you for upwards of two years; nor has any allegation been made that I was not an efficient and faithful servant.

Under these circumstances I can be well content with defeat—a defeat which I would not, if I could, have averted by resorting to means which would have been alike disrespectful to yourselves and demoralising by their example. For the strenuous and UNBOUGHT services which so many of you have so heartily rendered me on public grounds I am deeply grateful, and remain,

Your obliged servant,
F. J. RUSDEN.

R. R. H. would further beg to draw attention to the arrangements he has made in the cuisine and other departments, so essential to the comfort and satisfaction of those who have occasion to make an Hotel a temporary home, having engaged all his employés with a strict regard to their efficiency in the several branches of their business.

The arrangements for families have been made with a considerate care for the comfort and privacy of those who may patronise his establishment; and in conclusion he would impress upon the public that his charges will be so moderately adjusted, that they must insure entire satisfaction.

JENKINS, for whom he solicits a continuance of that support which has been so liberally awarded to himself and his predecessors during the last forty years. July 1st.

MR. W. J. JENKINS, entering upon the above large and well-known establishment, which, as a Drug and Dispensing business under successive proprietors, may claim the distinction of being almost coeval with the colony, respectfully solicits the continued patronage of the public and of the Medical profession.

He begs further to announce that it is his intention not only to keep up, but greatly to enlarge upon the present extensive stock in drugs and chemicals, which, as heretofore, will be imported from the first London houses.

That the prescriptions of physicians and surgeons sent to this house will be most carefully dispensed by first class assistants, and from the most genuine drugs, under the immediate eye of the proprietor, whose successful personal management of this same business some nineteen years ago will, he trusts, additionally guarantee the efficiency and accuracy of the dispensing department. NOTICE.—The attention of intending Purchasers of the TANNABAR Station and Stock to be sold by public auction, by Mr. R. P. Richardson, at his Rooms, Bank Buildings, George-street, on MONDAY next, 25th July, is directed to the following ADVERTISEMENT from Mr. Lakeman:—"The undersigned begs to notify that he will indemnify any one in the purchase of the cattle, branded on rump or hip, or in both places MN with or without the letter H; earmarked with swallow-tail from off ear, they having been my property since March 1st, 1856, and that all documents relative thereto are preserved, and will be for inspection on the day of sale; after which, proceedings will be instituted against Michael Neil for his presumption. Meanwhile, parties interested are referred to M. C Stephen, Esq., solicitor, Elizabeth-street, Sydney." (Signed). HENRY B. LAKEMAN.

NOTICE.—TO CARRIERS ON THE WESTERN ROAD.—Carriers supplied with the best new maize (hard as steel), at 4s. per bushel, from one bushel to one thousand. N. B.—Groceries, drapery, &c., at Sydney prices. G. F. NEALE, storekeeper, Penrith.

THE UNDERSIGNED, in returning thanks for past favours to the inhabitants of Bowenfels, District of Hartley, and the public generally, begs to notify that he ceases from this date to give any credit whatever. That all accounts, promissory notes, bills of sale, &c., overdue, must be paid at once; and that promissory notes to fall due must be met at maturity: all parties failing in doing so will be sued without distinction. Parties wishing goods for cash will do well to inspect the stock on hand, which will be found varied and extensive. JOHN M'LENNAN, Bowenfels, June 1st, 1859.

CONFECTIONARY!!—Merchants, Storekeepers, and others can be supplied with every variety of very superior confectionary (warranted genuine), in any quantity, on the shortest notice, and at prices that cannot fail to give satisfaction; with every attention paid to packing, to ensure their safe delivery in any part of the colony; by W. J. CATES, 456, George-street.

TENNENT'S ALE AND PORTER.—This brand, from its admirable keeping properties, and its retention of the delicate aroma of the hops, commands a large and rapidly increasing sale in all the leading foreign and colonial markets, in some of which it has an established reputation of 30 years' standing.

The Porter has been purchased in large quantities by the commissariat of Calcutta, for the Indian army, and is highly approved for its purity and soundness.

As Messrs. J. and R. Tennent are both brewers and bottlers of their own manufacture, and possess the largest establishment in Great Britain for the bottling of malt liquors, their bottled liquors may be relied on as pure and unadulterated; and as prepared for consumption in Australia, with all the care and skill derived from an enlarged and matured experience, advantages so important as to have secured for this brand, wherever it is well known, a marked preference.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—Armed with this great antidote, the traveller is prepared to encounter all varieties of climate, for he has the means of eradicating nearly every species of internal disease. The endemics of the arid plains and the dense bush country, the miasmatic swamps and streams permeating the neighbourhood of the diggings, and the epidemics which at particular seasons decimate the population of our crowded towns and settlements, are susceptible of being controlled by the purifying, disinfecting action of the Pills upon the animal fluids; while external diseases and injuries are rapidly and thoroughly cured by the anti-inflammatory and healing agency of the Ointment. Sold at the establishment of Professor Holloway, 244, Strand (near Temple Bar), London; and at 80, Maiden-lane, New York; also, by all respectable druggists and dealers in medicine throughout the civilised world, and in all parts of Australia, at the following prices:—1s. 3d., 3s. 3d., and 5s. each pot. There is a considerable saving by taking the largest sizes. N.B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each pot.

IMPORTANT TO SHIP-MASTERS AND OWNERS OF BOATS.

Clause No. 88.—And be it enacted, that the master of every ship or vessel, belonging in the whole or in part to any of her Majesty's subjects shall, within twenty-four hours after her report, paint, or cause to be painted, on the outside of the stern of every boat belonging to such ship or vessel, the name of such ship or vessel, and the port or place to which she belongs, and the master's name withinside the transom, in white or yellow Roman letters, not less than two inches in length, on a black ground, and, in default thereof, such master shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding ten pounds, nor less than two pounds.

Clause 89. And be it enacted that the owner of every boat not belonging to any ship or vessel shall paint, or cause to be painted, upon the stern of such boat, in white or yellow Roman letters, of two inches in length, on a black ground, the name of the owner or owners of the boat, and the port or place to which she belongs, on pain of the forfeiture of such boat not so marked, wherever the same shall be found.

Clause 91. And be it enacted that no ship, vessel, or boat, under the tonnage allowed by law to be registered, shall be employed, either in the removal of goods or passengers, or for any purpose whatever, unless duly licensed, according to the form hereinafter stated; and every such ship, vessel, or boat so employed, without being duly licensed as aforesaid, shall be forfeited, together with the tackle, furniture, and apparel thereof, and shall and may be seized by any officer of Customs.

Further attention is also called to the 34th clause of the "Merchant Shipping Act" of 1854, viz.:—

Clause 34.—The following rules shall be observed, with respect to the names of British registered ships: that is to say—

(1.) Before registry, the name of each ship, and the port to which she belongs shall be painted on a conspicuous part of her stern, on a dark ground, in white or yellow letters, of a length not less than four inches.

(2.) No change shall be made in the name of any registered ship;

(3.) No concealment, absence, or avoidable obliteration of the above name shall be permitted, except for the purpose of escaping capture by an enemy;

(4.) The ship shall not be described by, or with the knowledge of the owner or master by any name other than the one by which she is registered;

And for every breach of the above rules, or any of them, the owner and master shall incur a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds.

Custom House.—Entered Outwards: July 22. City of Sydney (s.), 731 tons, Captain Moodie, for Melbourne; Francis, schooner, 102 tons, Captain Chelon, for New Caledonia; Goldseeker, schooner, 149 tons, Captain Beedel, for Melbourne.

The Illalong, steamer, from Morpeth, passed the Southern Cross, schooner, yesterday, off Terrigal Head, standing to the south-east.

The Tasmania (s.) left the wharf at noon yesterday, for Launceston and Hobart Town, having on board a detachment of the 12th Regiment, consisting of 4 officers, 105 rank and file, 7 women, and 10 children.

The Gale at Newcastle.—Captain Griffin, of the Paterson steamer, arrived yesterday afternoon, has furnished us with the following particulars:—Throughout Thursday it blew a perfect gale at Newcastle, the rain falling in torrents. Nearly all the vessels in harbour dragged their anchors. The Peru, a large Dutch ship, was thrown on her beam ends, in one of the gusts, having but little cargo on board. She remained in that position throughout the day; attempts were being made to righten her when the Paterson left. Nearly all the galvanized roof of the store of the Railway Terminus completely blew off. Ropes were thrown across the building to secure it from blowing away.

The Weather.—Captain Adams, of the Illalong steamer, reports having had a severe passage to Newcastle on Wednesday night. After clearing Sydney Heads the wind from the S.E. blew with terrific violence, accompanied with thick rain and a heavy rolling sea.

The Lady Emma Bruce is still detained in quarantine, and is not expected to be released for some days.

The Prince Alfred (s.) will be cleaned and painted previous to her next trip to New Zealand.

A waterman, named M'Quain, started from the Queen's Wharf, on Wednesday last with a boat load of provisions for the Lady Emma Bruce, in quarantine, and nothing having been heard of him up to yesterday it was feared that the boat had gone down. The Port Master therefore sent a boat down, when it was found that he had arrived safe, having put part of his loading on board a schooner at the Heads.

A Wreck.—Captain Griffin, of the Paterson steamer, arrived yesterday morning, reports having passed a large piece of wreck on his way up from the Hunter. It had the appearance of part of a vessel over-end, with the larboard quarter a-wash; Bird Island at the time bore W. by S. Bird Island Point, N.W. by W., Terrigal Point S.W. From appearances it had not been long in the water, and probably a vessel of 60 tons. Captain Adams, of the Illalong steamer, confirms the report of Captain Griffin. After leaving Newcastle yesterday morning, until passing Bird Island several portions of a wreck were seen, and also a keg, apparently a two-gallon rum keg, but could not distinguish any of the pieces, as the sea was still very high. Some of them were like good size spars and other pieces of a vessel's timbers.

PILOTAGE IN THE RIVER TAMAR, TASMANIA.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Sir,—In your issue of the 8th of June there is a paragraph copied from the Launceston Cornwall Chronicle, headed "A Boarding Boat at the Heads Station of the Pilots."

As this article would lead your readers to infer that the Pilot Station at the entrance of the port of Launceston is totally unprovided with the necessary appointments and appliances for the safety of the navigation of the port, I shall esteem it a favour as the Chairman of the Launceston Marine Board, under whose jurisdiction this port is placed, if you will publish the following statement:—

At the Low Head Pilot Station of the river Tamar three branch pilots and eight men are stationed. Each pilot is provided with a whale-boat, and for the purpose of boarding or conducting vessels in rough weather there is a large boat which has been constructed and fitted on the most approved principles, for the work she is intended to perform.

The senior pilot (Mr. John Scott), who has had more than twenty years experience of this river, is placed in charge of the station, and with six men, for a boats crew, at his command, has always done his duty satisfactorily.

In connection with this station there is a flag staff and signal man placed near the Light-house, and also a telegraph wire in communication with Launceston and Hobart Town. I may also mention there there is a powerful steam-tug belonging to the Marine Department, kept in readiness for any emergency that might occur.

I would not have troubled you with these remarks, but a paragraph of the above description, copied from one of our local newspapers, and appearing in your widely circulated journal, tends to mislead the public, and does injustice to the responsible authorities of this port.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

GEORGE GILMORE.

Launceston, June 30, 1859.

The following sailing directions for the port of Launceston, have been forwarded by an old friend, Captain George Gilmore, and we have much pleasure in publishing them for general information:—

Leading Towers at the Entrance of the River Tamar.

As it is not generally known that two towers have been erected on the south end of Lagoon Beach as leading marks into the Western Channel at the entrance of the River Tamar, the following directions are published by order of the Launceston Marine Board.

These towers are built of stone, and were completed in the year 1849, of a circular form, and at an elevation of thirty feet from the ground, and as they are kept perfectly white can be seen more than two leagues at sea.

Commanders of vessels when running for the port, and approaching within two leagues of the entrance, should bring the Light-house on the Low Head to bear E.S.E., by compass, until the towers on Lagoon Beach are plainly visible, then bring them in line, and keeping them in one, steer boldly in. This course will clear the least end of the Hebe Reef, three cables' length; enter the Western Channel midway, with the Black Buoy off the Western Edge of the middle ground, on the port hand, and the White Buoy off the yellow rock, on the starboard, still keeping the towers in one, proceed under easy sail to good anchorage, in nine fathoms abreast of Lagoon Beach.

The Towers bears from each other (E.S.E. and W.N.W. by compass), and the purpose of their erection is, that strangers arriving off the port in bad weather, when pilots cannot get outside, might be able to enter with safety.

In order to effect this by one line of bearing it was necessary to pass near the east end of the Hebe Reef, but by paying attention to the leading marks there is no danger.

Commanders of vessels will be therefore careful not to open the inland or eastern tower to the southward of the western or outer one.

When the weather will not permit the pilots to proceed outside, the boat will be laying in mid-channel, with a flag flying.

These sailing directions, in connection with those already published in the Australian Directory, will be found useful, and it is recommended as a rule, that strangers never attempt the eastern channel without a pilot, as this port is at present difficult to enter at night, even to those who are well acquainted with it.

It is in contemplation to place lights on these Towers, of which due notice will be given.

George Gilmore, Master Warden.

Marine Board Office, Launceston, 1st June 1859.

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1859.

While wars and rumours of wars agitate the public mind, mechanicians and inventors naturally have their attention diverted to improving on the old fashioned weapons of destruction, and discovering more terrible agents of devastation. War is now carried on, on such a colossal scale, that it must of necessity be concluded in a briefer period than formerly, for the process is so exhausting that a powerful nation rapidly succumbs under it, much more a weak and decrepid one. It is the great object, therefore, of modern generals to strike heavy blows, to do enormous execution as promptly as possibly—partly to intimidate the enemy and exhibit in a striking light the fact of physical superiority, and partly to escape from the greater exertion of continuously sustained effort, and the risk of reverses in prolonged and doubtful encounters. To attain to a superiority in weapons of offence, as well as dexterity in the use of them, is the aim of all modern generals who keep themselves abreast of the progress of their art. Firearms have not diminished the necessity for personal bravery, nor has the use of them at all tended to the decay of courage, as was abundantly testified during the Crimean war. But they have made courage only one element amongst several that determine the success of a campaign. Soldierly qualities are no proof against rifles and guns that can hit at a distance of miles. To be opposed to such weapons, without any corresponding means of offence, may naturally be supposed to intimidate an army, while soldiers who knew that they possessed or were supported by such powerful auxiliaries, would proportionately feel that confidence which is a great element in success. It was stated, at the outset of the Russian war, that the Russians had less fear of the personal prowess of British soldiers than of the mechanical genius of the people, and of the terrible engines of war that they would bring to bear on the conflict. And it was not till it was discovered that the military authorities of Great Britain had been comfortably asleep during the long period of the peace that the Russians became reassured. Since that discovery was made, the spirit of the British people has forced on the Government an attention to mechanical improvements somewhat commensurate with the progress of engineering in its civil branches, and commensurate also with the growing need there is that England should be able to take her part in the drama of European politics. The Minie rifle—much to the grief of old stagers at the Horse Guards—has been substituted for Brown Bess; Mr. Whitworth, the celebrated Manchester mechanician, has been enlisted in the public service to improve still further on the construction of rifles; while Mr. Armstrong, another civilian, has been taken into the Government service and decorated with honours, in order that he may give the public arsenals the benefit of his recent inventions and his long practical experience. These things have had the effect of turning the attention of many ingenious men, who have no particular connection with military matters, to the construction of guns, and explosives, and impregnable vessels, and a fresh crop of inventions is announced almost every month.

Yet the arts of peace seem none the less prosperous from this diversion of a large part of the national ingenuity to military purposes. The industrial powers of society are enlarged quite as fast as its destructive powers. If the forces of nature are made subservient on the one side to the destruction of edifices and the annihilation of human life, they are also made obedient to the task of multiplying the comforts and conveniences of life, and facilitating that peaceful commerce by which all that comfort is sustained. The last fifty years have been rich in the triumphs of mind over matter; both on the ocean and on the land those triumphs have been seen. The half-century that has witnessed the establishment of ocean steam navigation, of railways, and of telegraphs, will be one of the most notable epochs in the history of human progress; and the second half of the century already promises, if not to give rise to equally potent revolutionary agencies, at least to give an enormous extension to those that have been already introduced.

We reprinted on Monday last two articles from the Times, indicative of this characteristic of the years that are passing over us, and giving account of improvements in the arts of steam navigation and submarine telegraphy—two arts on which the quick communication of these colonies with the mother country depends, and which therefore must always have a great interest for us. If all is true that is reported of these two improvements, the benefit will be as great to these colonies as to any part of the world.

The first of the two improvements to which we refer, consists in the employment of superheated steam—an addition of power which is gained simply by utilising heat which is generally allowed to run to waste, and the effect of which is to create a saving of nearly thirty per cent. in the expenditure of fuel. This is an improvement equally applicable to all steam engines whether on land or sea, but its greatest value is in its application to marine engines. Economy in fuel is an object on shore, but at sea where every ton has to be carried by the vessel that wants it, and much of it has to bear the prior expense of freight round perhaps half the world, any reduction in the rate of consumption will be a boon. The great difficulty in the way of maintaining an unbroken steam communication between England and Australia by way of the Cape, was the impossibility of carrying coals enough. The Great Eastern was devised by Mr. Brunel to overcome the difficulty—a gigantic, but somewhat clumsy device, and which has not only proved a financial blunder, but has far exceeded the proportions of existing commerce. A far simple and less costly solution of the problem will be attained by so diminishing the bulk of the fuel necessary to be carried, that vessels of a moderate size, and adapted to the present condition of commerce, may be able to make the voyage with punctuality and economy. In the long stretch across the Pacific which the Panama route involves, an apparatus which will save one quarter of the amount of coal at present considered to be necessary, will be no small boon to the contractors, as removing the only real difficulty in the way of a speedy and punctual performance of the service.

Contemporaneously with enlarged steam communication, telegraphic communication with the mother country is the thing most ardently desired by colonists. And just at this juncture, when we are about to be called to a practical consideration of all the terms and details of a contract, Messrs. Silver and Co. come to our aid, with an improved submarine cable, which gets rid of several difficulties that seemed to stand in our way. Gutta percha, though very useful as a non-conductor of electricity, has its drawbacks. It melts at the heat at which the thermometer stands in the shade on an Australian summer day, and not only so, but undergoes, on such an exposure to heat, a chemical change which destroys its value as a non-conductor. Whole miles of cable have thus been rendered useless by a voyage in a ship's hold across the equator. India rubber is free from this objection. It will stand a boiling heat, will endure, without injury, a compression greater than that of the superincumbent weight of the Atlantic, and is so tough that it will bear a good deal of rubbing and chafing before its texture is destroyed. It seems, therefore, to possess all the qualities required for the sheathing of submarine cables, and when it is added that it can be supplied at about half the present price of gutta percha, the list of its qualifications appears complete. With such improvements announced, it would seem that our patience need not be very sorely tried before what now seems a dream, shall become a fact.

Like all human enjoyments, the musical entertainment must come to an end. In every material point it has been a great success. Tremendous storms, and roads almost impassable, have not damped the ardour of the lovers of song, although, doubtless, many less enthusiastic have been hindered. When the expenses and receipts are balanced, we shall see whether the undertaking has answered in a pecuniary way. We hope it has, because public enjoyments cannot be repeated at a loss.

We may see a musical festival under auspices more favourable, but never promoted with greater zeal. We hope, for the sake of those who have not enjoyed the privilege of attendance, that at some date not distant the opportunity may be renewed. The public have had almost every specimen which the musical art can present, and every excellence, except, perhaps, the very highest of which it is susceptible. We hardly know whether it is fortunate for those who have listened to the Swedish nightingale, who remember the notes of Braham, or who have heard the choir of the Sistine chapel, and from the highest style of perfection are enabled to compare the performances of the week—that they are thus disqualified to share the satisfaction and rapture of less sated ears. One thing is clear, that of the multitudes who have attended the celebration, the greater part had heard nothing half so entrancing, and that their expectations were not only equalled but surpassed. Of course in professional singers the public has a right to expect both natural gifts and cultivated taste. These were not wanting in the voices of the lady performers—the deep melody of Madame Sara Flower—the rich, sweet, tender strains of Mrs. Testar and Madame Carandini, trembling with the pathos or warbling the triumphs of the theme; neither must we forget the songstress from the Australian grove, whose vocal powers were recognised by the audience with that interest which native talent always inspires; nor pass over without proper acknowledgment the correct, unaffected, and impressive singing of the gentlemen who, both professional and amateur, have performed their parts with so much applause.

The public especially owe their thanks to those gentlemen who, with such unwearied diligence, have gathered together so much musical talent and skill. The labour has been immense, and many the disappointments and mortifications. It does not follow that a taste for the harmonies of music is attended with a corresponding love of social peace. It would, therefore, have been no wonder had the enterprise failed where there were no precedents to follow, and where the arrangements of the parts would be so likely to disappoint some personal ambition. Those, however, who will undertake in a conciliating spirit to combine and arrange material otherwise discordant, will always find assistance in the better sense and more correct feeling of the majority. It is astonishing how a few by persevering discontent and unwearied complaints may create the impression of general dissatisfaction. This impression is, however, but transient, unless it be supported by the encouragement of public notice. There are, it is true, some grievances, often real in themselves, which create a momentary annoyance even in the most candid and peaceable. These are the discount we are compelled to pay for all social pleasures, and they act most wisely who do not permit them to rankle in the remembrance. We ought never to forget the maxim of Poor Richard that "when two men ride on one horse one must of necessity ride behind."

The musical critics, of course, differ in their opinions with respect to the performance of the different pieces, which require such a variety of talent and such elaborate combination. The "Messiah," by common consent, admits and demands the highest style of execution. Perhaps to a popular audience the "Creation" would yield the greatest delight. To say nothing of the uneasiness felt by some minds in listening to the "Messiah"—where words of awful import are greeted with clapping of hands and other tokens of exhilaration—the subjects of the "Creation" admit of a more cheerful and attractive variety of sacred song. It is not easy to forget some of those sweet solo and choral performances which represented the rise of the world from chaos—the stages of its development—the music of the spheres—the warbling of the birds—the cries of joy and satisfaction from the beasts of the field—the songs of the first pair in paradise — the triumph of the heavenly host, and the outburst, the intermingling, ever varying, but always harmonious voices of the whole creation, swelling upward in one vast volume of triumphant joy.

As befitted an entertainment given by a learned University, everything was decorous and orderly. The persons employed were quiet and respectful, and the audience, both in appearance and in conduct, might have satisfied the most fastidious censor.

We are happy to see that a provision has been made to meet the convenience of persons to whom time and money are especially precious. We should have been glad, had it been possible, to extend the advantage still further, for we imagine that thousands who would desire to be present can not take advantage of to-day. We wish every working family could have shared the gratification. A great public service is rendered by cultivating a popular taste for music in its highest forms. It is almost the only sensuous enjoyment which cannot be carried to excess. It would be fortunate for this country if every cottage were occasionally cheered with a domestic concert, and if all were taught to use well that wonderful faculty imparted by the Creator; for there is no music like that of the human voice—none that can reach so far into the depths of our nature, or awaken such sympathy with its griefs or its gladness. That Power which taught melody to the tenants of the wood, and which has presented to the home of man the hallowed harmonies of eternity, has given to his social existence the strains of song to soothe his sorrows, to animate his courage, and to give expression to all the varying emotions of his chequered life.

The University has provided an enjoyment. It has done more: it has afforded an important example and lesson to the colony, and is entitled to our thanks.

The Hon. Charles Cowper.—A preliminary meeting of the friends and supporters of this gentleman was held, at Mr. Spinks', White Hart hotel, King-street, on Monday evening, when it was resolved to invite Mr. Cowper to a public banquet. After some discussion, a sub-committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. The committee met again last evening, and reported that they had called for tenders for the supply of the banquet, and had accepted one from a number that had been sent in. The committee then resolved to call a public meeting of the friends and supporters of Mr. Cowper on an early day, for the purpose of appointing stewards to carry out the object in a manner worthy of the occasion.

School of Arts.—An animated and interesting debate on the question—"Is the use of tobacco injurious?" (adjourned over from the previous Friday evening) came off in the hall of this institution yesterday evening. The arguments pro and con of the question were taken up and warmly discussed. The principal speaker was a medical gentleman, who supported the affirmative. He instanced several cases that had come under his professional notice, in which the too great use of tobacco had led to serious illness, and eventually, in one case, to madness. Such serious results did not generally follow from indulgence in the habit; but he maintained that it always produced more or less of injury on the system, and made it more susceptible to disease. On the contrary, it was contended that the moderate use of tobacco produced a soothing effect on the system, and that frequently when the mind and body were fatigued by long-continued exertion, tobacco had the effect of allaying irritability and inducing sleep. At ten o'clock, the question was put from the chair and carried in the affirmative.

The Opera.—The musical week will conclude this evening with Il Trovatore at the Prince of Wales Theatre. The great success of the Festival, notwithstanding the unusually inclement state of the weather, has placed beyond doubt the fact that Sydney is an eminently musical city; and the production of Trovatore gave an impetus to the already advancing desire for that high class of composition which has so delighted the thousands who attended the University during this week. Although the object to be attained was principally that of rendering with force those grand oratorios that have immortalised their composers—yet it was abundantly evident that the lighter, or secular, kind of music, which formed portions of the miscellaneous concerts, was an agreeable divertissement. Mesdames Sara Flower and Carandini, and Messrs. Sherwin, Gregg, and Howson, appear in Trovatore this evening.

SYDNEY MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

Fourth Day.

Handel's sacred oratorio, "The Messiah," was yesterday performed for the second time, in connection with the Sydney Musical Festival. The attractions offered in a repetition of this successful performance were aided by an auspicious change in the weather of a clear bright sky; as a consequence, the hall was very nearly filled.

There was great appropriateness in the selection of the "Messiah" for the opening and the concluding performances of the University Festival;—we say concluding, because the concert advertised for this afternoon has been a subsequent arrangement, and bears rather a supplementary character. A loftier achievement could not have presented itself to human ambition than that of commemorating in a grand musical epic the greatest event that the world has ever witnessed—of attempting, by the aid of harmonious sounds, to raise the soul to the comprehension of the mysteries of God's incarnation and man's redemption. The vital importance of the consummation invests with the deepest meaning and subjective interest each scene in the great drama. How successful the effort has been is, to a great extent, shown by the universal popularity of "The Messiah" wherever good music is practised and appreciated; and it is highly creditable to the cultivated musical taste of this community that so much ability and zeal have been directed to the successful production of this sublime composition.

The performance of "The Messiah" yesterday was no less successful than on Tuesday; indeed, a perceptible improvement was manifested in the choruses, their singing being marked by greater precision—the result probably of increasing confidence. The chef-d'œuvre was undoubtedly the Hallelujah chorus; the effect produced by the immense volume of sound was overpowering, and completely astonished those who had not attended any of the previous performances, or had expressed incredulity as to their success. It is quite unnecessary, after the lengthy notice we gave of the performance of "The Messiah" on the opening day, to repeat the encomiums which the performances of yesterday fully merited. It would, however, be unpardonable not to notice, in referring to the pieces which appeared to attract the greatest admiration, the thrilling impression produced by Madame Sara Flower's execution of the air, "He shall Feed His Flock;" its effect being greatly assisted by the soft organ accompaniment. The second part of same air was given by Madame Carandini in her purest style; the prolongation of the notes in the concluding words, "Ye shall find Rest unto your Souls," holding the audience in breathless admiration. Mrs. Testar's rendering of the air "How beautiful are the feet"—was marked by the fascinating grace which this lady infuses into her singing—the words "Gospel of peace" being made felicitously expressive of the "glad tidings of good things," and an appropriate prelude to the grand chorus which follows—"Their sound is gone out into all lands." The bass air—"Why do the nations," was given with great power, by Mr. Waller, his performance of this piece being a departure from the programme, which seemed to satisfy the audience. The cornopean accompaniment to the recitative—"Behold I show you a mystery," intended to realise the awful peal which shall summon the corruptible to put on incorruption, was performed by Mr. Kohler in a manner which conveyed the powerful conception of that event in the mind of the great composer. Preceding the final chorus—"Worthy is the Lamb!"—and laying, as it were, in individual realisation a foundation for the ascription of praise for man's redemption, is the exquisite soprano air—"If God be for us, who can be against us"—which was allotted to a young lady amateur, whose sweet, rich voice, and confident but unaffected manner, were happily adapted for the expression of this climax of the triumphant assurance of "God's elect." The only compliment it is necessary to pay to Miss Brady's performance of this piece is to express the desire, uniformly indulged in by all who have attended the Festival entertainments, that her services may be available for the future performances of the various musical societies in this city.

On the termination of the Festival entertainments it is gratifying to congratulate their enterprising originators both on the intrinsic success of the performances, and also on the large numbers who have availed themselves of the opportunities. Considering the tempestuous weather on the two middle days, and the high charge for admission, the attendance has not only constituted a success, but has amply demonstrated the enthusiasm which it is possible to kindle when neither pains nor expense are spared to bring out classical musical composition in the best style. In the University Festival performances the lovers of sacred music have enjoyed a treat which may not be repeated for many years. So large an orchestra at least is not likely to be assembled in Sydney for a long time to come. The labour of getting together and training nearly three hundred and fifty performers deserves to be dwelt upon with a fair recognition of the assiduity and enthusiasm with which a large number of them have rendered their gratuitous services. The strong attendance of the choir when the weather was most unpropitious, attracted, as they were, by no other inducement than their love for the pursuit, and their direct personal interest in the success of the festival, will doubtless serve as a stimulus to other musical societies in this and the neighbouring colonies. Unfortunately, although the rain has tested the stedfastness of the musical performers, it has sadly interfered with the financial success of the undertaking, and even with a crowded house to-morrow afternoon the committee apprehend a deficit. With a view to remove this, it is proposed to give a second performance of "the Creation," in the Prince of Wales theatre, in the course of next week, the particulars of which will be duly announced.

The closing entertainment in the University Hall will be a concert comprising a selection from the works already performed, and to commence this afternoon at three o'clock.

LAND ALLIANCE.—ILLEGAL TENURE OF CROWN LANDS.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Sir,—I have read, in your publication of this morning, a report of a meeting of an association, whose object is embodied in the prefix to this communication, held last evening at the Robin Hood Inn, South Head Road. It is difficult for me to see that any case of substantial grievance is made out by the complainants. But with reference to the Minister for Lands and Works, I may remind them of the old Roman adage,

Nec Deus intersit nisi dignus vindice nodus.

It does not seem to me that Mr. Robertson was quite the right divinity to appeal to, or rather that the proper course of setting the celestial machinery in motion has been had recourse to.

The grievances in question appear to be some improper measurements of land, which, from the bygone management of the Survey Department, I think may very readily be admitted as possible, if not probable. Without making a public affair of this, it seems to me that the general public might have made known their grievance without seeking to enlist Mr. Robertson as the prominent informer. He, is no doubt, the proper functionary before whom to lay information of the abuse, but why make such a needless parade of it?

The casus belli is pretty much of the character of a puddle in a storm. I sympathise with the injured public, and, though I think the Minister's allusion to the chandler's shop was, perhaps, a little pettish, there is a good deal of truth in his remarks. I wish, if we must agitate, that we had some more substantial grievances to occupy our attention. Would it not be better to try and get rich, and have something more important to lay before the country than a mere parish vestry affair, such as this?

A POOR MAN.

CITY RATES AND BAILIFFS.

To the Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald.

Sir,—In your issue of this morning appears a letter signed "A Citizen," complaining of the way in which the city rates are collected, and wishing to be informed of a remedy against the appearance of the municipal bailiff. Now, if "Citizen," or other parties similarly situated, had only paid the rates due on the house occupied by him or them when he or they received the notice required by 14 Victoria, No. 41, some three months ago, he would not have been honoured by the visit he complains of. And as "Citizen" further complains of the paid collector (an officer not in existence) having neglected his duty, I draw his attention to the 14 Victoria, No. 41, section 137, which will perhaps be the means of preventing the annoyance complained of for the future. By inserting the above you will oblige

ONE IN THE SECRET

Friday Morning, July 22.

THE ARMING OF THE PEOPLE.

(From the London Daily Telegraph.)

Few sights are invested with greater grandeur than the re-awakening of military spirit in a nation after long peace. England's wars for nearly half a century have been carried on at a great distance, beyond the outworks of the civilized world and distance acts upon the mind like time: so that we have felt comparatively little interest respecting events which in themselves were of immense importance. Now the storm of war, in the apprehension of most men, threatens to burst upon the shores of England itself, and we observe among its people the first symptoms of preparation. On occasions like this we must not forget the very significant fact that we are thirty millions, and that there must therefore be among us seven millions of men fit to carry arms. Of all these not one should be suffered to remain without his weapon or in ignorance of the proper use of it. In the days of our ancestors before the invention of fire-arms, the bow was hung up over every English hearth, and it was considered a disgrace to an Englishman not to be able to wield it with skill. It should be the same now with the rifle. There is no nation better fitted to excel in military achievements than our own, none more hardy, none less enervated by luxury and indulgence, none better qualified by nature to endure hunger, thirst, fatigue, the changes of climate, the inclemency of seasons, storms on the ocean, or disasters and calamities of all kinds on land. The Englishman is eminently fitted to every phase of fortune; when he has any favourite scheme he grasps it with invincible tenacity; and, through all the changes and chances of a thousand years, he has never entered into any conflict in which he has not proved victorious or perished. When death comes he must submit to it like others; but slavery or dishonour he finds it impossible to endure.

To the great credit of Cambridge University and town, they have taken the lead in what must inevitably become a national movement. The Home Secretary, some days ago, observed, that the Government would view with approbation the formation of volunteer corps throughout the country, and forthwith the authorities of Cambridge assemble and organize a formidable rifle corps, which is now probably a thousand strong. The speeches delivered at the meeting which led to this patriotic result smacked of the true old English spirit. Under the surplice and the cassock, the hearts of our countrymen beat as warmly, ay, and as fiercely too, as under cuirass or scarlet cloth. In the Church or out of the Church, an Englishman is an Englishman, and takes to steel, when the times require it, as naturally as to his breakfast. Dr. Bateson, the Vice-Chancellor, led off in this debate, and was worthily followed by Dr. Paget, Mr. Emery, Professor Selwyn, and others. In complete harmony with the place and persons, Demosthenes was quoted the orator of democracy, who, in the midst of a degeneracy of which we happily have nothing, stimulated his countrymen to heroic efforts against a tyrant. Such allusions, made in the presence of assembled scholars, are not pedantry. Every one who heard the speaker was familiar with the fiery eloquence of the Philippics which made the hearers exclaim, "Let us fight Philip."

These, then, are the circumstances in which we again find England; and, if our rulers are gifted with the slightest wisdom, they will take care that such noble sentiments shall not cool. Now is the time to give full scope to the ardour of the people. It was a moderate calculation of one of the Cambridge speakers that 300,000 riflemen might in a short time be under arms in various parts of England. We can perceive no difficulty that would be experienced in raising the ranks to 1,200,000 men, who might be denominated the Rifle National Guard, whose exercises and attitude would inspire Louis Napoleon, and every other despot, with a proper respect for these islands. After the organisation of such a guard, a foreign army would as soon think of marching down the crater of Mount Ætna as of setting foot on the British shores. But as it is, with a population unorganised, undrilled, undisciplined, we doubt whether any Continental Government could persuade itself to make an attempt upon England. While an army of 100,000 men should be engaged in meeting the first brunt of invasion, the rest of the population, in irregular but fierce masses, would precipitate themselves upon the foe. There might, and would, be fearful carnage; but let the sacrifice of life be what it might, the invader would be annihilated. But it is the duty of a Government to prevent such sacrifice, by encouraging and enabling the people to make the most of their valour by discipline and careful organisation. In several parts of the country the abundance of horses would facilitate the formation of mounted rifle corps, which might be local in ordinary times, but be rapidly mobilised in case of need. These forces, acquainted with every road, ravine, height, or valley, would sweep along the shores and downs, advance, recede, or concentrate themselves on any given point with a velocity which would be impossible to foreigners.

To answer the various exigencies of the service, a great difference in tactics and discipline should be introduced into the defensive body. Some corps should be instructed to run along the coast, bivouac among the rocks, or on the summits of cliffs, accustoming both man and horse to all changes of weather; other bodies should be taught to operate in large masses on open plains, and sustain the shock of cavalry or artillery; other portions of the guard, again, should be familiarised with garrison duty, with the throwing up and defence of fortifications, earthworks, breastworks, curtains, bastions, and ravelines. In this way the heroic population of these islands might soon have all their latent vigour called forth, and render the soil they inhabit unapproachable to an enemy. Undue stress need not be laid on the assistance which would be afforded us by the ocean; but, in spite of steam, which is popularly said to have bridged the Channel, an invading force would be very much obstructed in its movements by having to traverse that bridge. Our sires of old were deemed so inhospitable that mariners shunned them with terror. Gentlemen speculating on the sea quietly in their drawing-rooms, or in spacious pictured halls, forget that, even with the aid of steam, our own Channel is often hard to cross, when the whole space between the cliffs of England and the flat and boggy coast of France is seething and foaming like a cauldron, and the wind blows a hurricane from the Atlantic.

But we should scorn to owe our safety to the ocean. Suppose the Channel filled up, could we not defend ourselves against the whole world in arms? We have descended ere now upon the continent, and marched in any direction we pleased hundreds of leagues without encountering any serious obstruction. Let the example of Cambridge be followed, and we might, if necessary, do so again at any future period. At present we confine ourselves to defensive warfare, to the protection of our hearths and altars, our wives and children, and of those spots so hallowed in the estimation of our forefathers, where the bones of the dead repose. Every inducement which can be given to a people to arm and organise itself is now held out to us. Setting aside altogether the dread of invasion, we have to maintain our place as a first-rate Power in the world, which we cannot do otherwise than by cultivating acquaintance with the sword and rifle. Personally, also, such exercises as we recommend would be of the utmost service to every individual, by developing all the powers of the body and mind, and creating that habit of self-confidence without which the greatest people degenerate into a rabble. We must remember, too, that not only our country but our institutions and our civilisation are worth defending—they have made us free; and it should not be said of liberty that it saps and undermines the courage of those who enjoy it. Let us prove by our conduct that, on the contrary, it augments the bravery of the brave, and renders those still nobler who were originally noble by nature. The example, we repeat, having been set, the youth of England, we feel sure, will not be slow to imitate it, and thus show to the world the spirit and daring by which a free country can be animated when circumstances call forth all its latent martial energy.

A Reminiscence of the Times of Gustavus Adolphus.—Having returned from a ramble about seven o'clock, the whole party walked down to the quay (with the exception of ourselves, who, the distance being considerable, were glad to get into a carriage), and took possession of a boat, which two Dalecarlian women—for they are the boatmen of Stockholm—rowed about a couple of miles to a house of refreshment in the Park. Here we were served with tea after the Swedish manner; that is, with the materials of tea and supper together. It was while sitting here that we heard, as the sun was setting, the voice of psalmody from a body of men's voices, and our look of inquiry was immediately answered—"O, it is the soldiers." We were, in truth, near the ground of their summer encampment—near enough to hear the melody of the evening psalm, with which, since the time of some devout monarch, it has been the custom of the Swedish troops to close the military duties of the day. The Lord's Prayer is previously recited by a man called out from the ranks; but this we did not hear.—Hinton and Stone's "Visit to Sweden."

CENTRAL POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE Mr. Warburton, Mr. R. K. Wilson, Mr. Neale, Mr. Peden, and Mr. Kettle.

Nine persons, who had been found in the streets in a state of intoxication, were severally ordered to pay a fine of 10s. or to be confined twenty-four hours.

Isabell Whittock, found loitering about the streets at a late hour, having no fixed abode, nor following any lawful avocation for a living, was found guilty of being an idle and disorderly person under the Vagrant Act, and was sentenced to be imprisoned one month.

Richard H. Cummins, charged by his wife with having threatened to knock her brains out, was required to give sureties of the peace or in lieu to be imprisoned one month.

Richard Murphy was charged with larceny. Robert Rowland, of South Head Road, publican, deposed that, about four o'clock yesterday afternoon, the prisoner alighted from an omnibus at the door, entered his (prosecutor's) house, and walked into the bar parlour—a room not usually used by the public but allowed on this occasion, there being a fire in the room, in consequence of the wet and cold; he called for liquor, and remained there about an hour, and on leaving very politely wished witness and his wife good day; very shortly after his departure he missed from over the mantelshelf in the parlour a gold watch and chain; no person other than the prisoner had been into that room since the watch was seen; he reported the robbery to the police, with a description of the prisoner; the watch and chain produced in Court are the same, and worth £20. Constable Fenton deposed that at ten o'clock last night a report of the robbery, and a description of the thief, were read to him at the lock-up, and in about half an hour afterwards he saw and apprehended the prisoner in George-street. The watch and chain were found at a pawn office, and prisoner was identified as the person of whom the money-lender received it as security for a loan of £4. The sum of £2 5s. was found in prisoner's possession. He offered no defence. Committed for trial at the District Court of Quarter Sessions.

George Still, found guilty of throwing stones in a public place, was sentenced to pay a penalty of 10s. or to be imprisoned twenty-four hours.

John Scanlon, of Newtown, grocer, appeared on summons to answer the information of George A. Davis, lessee of the Newtown toll-gate, for having on the 15th instant left the main road and crossed the University paddock, on horseback, with intent to avoid payment of toll, in violation of the Toll Act. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Cory, and the defence by Mr. Redman. The evidence was clear enough, but the arguments of the advocates on sundry technicalities occupied nearly four hours. Their worships overruled the objections, found the offence proved, and sentenced the defendant to pay a penalty of 10s. with 25s. 6d. costs, or to be imprisoned three days.

In another summons case the defendant was found guilty of having committed an assault, and fined 1s.; and in another an order for maintenance was taken by consent.

Bridget Hayes and Ann Cummins, her daughter, were charged with having on the 8th instant unlawfully and violently assaulted and beat Esther Martin. The parties, it appeared, are (or were) all residents in a place called Dalley's-lane, and for some time past have not been on the best of terms,—Mrs. Martin having been recently held in recognizances to keep the peace in consequence of a threat of personal violence. On the 8th July they had some words. In the afternoon of that day, complainant deposed, she had just come out of her house when she was met by the younger defendant, who said that now she (complainant) was bound to the peace she (Cummins) could do as she liked with her, at the same time striking her on the forehead with a kettle she had in her hand; she was knocked down by the blow, and when down received others; some of the neighbours carried her into her own house, she being insensible, and was thence removed to the hospital where she remained until to-day. A witness for the prosecution deposed that when complainant was struck by Cummins she was running towards her as if to strike her, but whether or not she intended to do so witness could not say—she had not risen her hand as if to strike—when she was knocked down by Cummins with the kettle; when down the other defendant took Mrs. Martin by the hair with one hand held her hair, and with the other beat her with a door-key about the head; complainant was carried, insensible, into her own house. Mr. Cory, for the defence, submitted that both his clients were entitled to be discharged; the younger was not to wait until she received prosecutrix's blow before acting in self-defence, while the elder only went to the assistance of her daughter, which she is by law allowed to do. Mr. Kettle said that as prosecutrix had clearly brought upon herself the treatment she had received she had no right to come here for redress. Case dismissed.

WATER POLICE COURT.

FRIDAY.

BEFORE the Water Police Magistrate and Mr. R. Ronald.

Ann Eston, who had been found drunk in a public place at the North Shore, was admonished, and discharged, this being her first offence.

A charge of having assaulted and beaten Eliza Lloyd was preferred against V. Simmons. Mr. Borton appeared for the prosecution, Mr. Moffatt for the defence. Complainant, who stated that she lived in Palmer-street, Woolloomooloo, deposed that on Sunday morning last she went upstairs and asked him (defendant) what business he had to speak about her, as it appeared he had made some reflections upon complainant's character. Defendant replied that he should do as he liked about it; and when complainant rejoined that what he had said was false, and that he was a liar, he struck her, knocking her down stairs. She was standing about a yard from the top of the stairs. It was admitted on behalf of defendant that, under the provocation received, he had probably given complainant a slight push, but with no intention of knocking her down stairs. Fined 20s., and ordered to pay Court and professional costs.

Michael Eury, master of the whaling barque Carnarvon, was, on the information of Tom Hardley Stephens, a seaman, charged with having unlawfully suffered a seaman to embark on board his ship on departing from Port Jackson, the name of such seaman not being contained in the written list of crew and passengers then delivered to the Water Police officer. Mr. Moffatt appeared for the prosecution. Tom Hardley Stephens (informant), a seaman on board the Carnarvon, deposed that on the 11th November last the vessel was proceeding on a whaling voyage, and when leaving the port she was boarded by the police at the Heads, when a document purporting to be a true list of the parties on board was handed to the police officer, and witness with others were mustered on deck. One man (John Macdonnell) did not appear with the rest; he had hoisted the ensign for the police boat, and when that was done the captain said to him "Now, Jack, you go down below till the police have gone," and he remained below while the police were on board, appearing again directly after the boat had gone away. Two or three days after the vessel had passed the Heads, Macdonnell told witness that he had been logged as a stow-away on board that vessel. Macdonnell acted during part of the voyage as boat-steerer and seaman, and was in charge of a boat, but was "knocked off duty" on the 28th June, on which day the defendant called him a "stow-away," and said he would not give him a damned penny for all he had done on board. Patrick Kelly, licensed boarding-house keeper, deposed that Macdonnell had been living at his house, and was on board the Carnarvon three weeks before the vessel left; the defendant had also told him that he was going to take Macdonell with him; on the vessel's return Macdonell was still on board. The outward list was now exhibited by inspector Cowell, and the name of Macdonell did not appear thereon. Macdonell was then placed in the witness-box, and deposed that during the latter part of last year he met defendant in George-street, Sydney, and, in consequence of the conversation that passed between them, he (Macdonell) was induced to go on board the Carnarvon. On the day she sailed witness made the flag for the police fast to the royal masthead, and then defendant ordered him to go below till the police boat had gone, which order he obeyed; when the boat had left the vessel he again went on deck and took the wheel. The captain had told him that he would be paid the same wages as the other men, and he signed the log after leaving. Other witnesses were heard, and all their evidence tended to confirm the statements previously made. In defence it was stated by Captain Eury that the whole affair was a conspiracy by his men, who wished to get him into trouble. Their Worships were of opinion that this was one of the clearest and worst cases of the kind that had been brought before the Court for the last six years, and intimated to defendant that he had made himself liable to a fine of £50. They, however, fined him £20, with all costs.

PICTON DISTRICT COURT.

BEFORE Henry Cary, Esq., Judge.

This Court opened on Wednesday last, with a list of fourteen cases. Messrs. Meymott, W. Cary, Wild, and Simpson, barristers, and Mr. Greer, solicitor, were present.

M'ENTYRE V. MULHOLLAND.

This was an action for slander. The damages were laid at £200. The slander complained of was, in substance, that the defendant had accused the plaintiff, in the presence of various persons, of being a cattle-stealer and thief. Plea, not guilty. At the commencement of the case, Mr. Simpson's applied for leave to file a plea of justification. The Judge granted the application upon the defendant producing an affidavit to the effect that he could substantiate such plea. A plea of justification was accordingly filed, which stated that the defendant had been informed by one Eldridge that the plaintiff had stolen certain cattle. Mr. Meymott, on behalf of the plaintiff, objected that this plea did not amount to a justification. The Judge disallowed the plea. The words declared on were substantially proved by the witnesses for the plaintiff, and moreover it was shown that Mr. William Antill, a magistrate in the neighbourhood, had prohibited the plaintiff from coming on his premises in consequence of the defendant having spoken to him of the plaintiff as a cattle-stealer, although he (Mr. Antill) had previously entertained a high character of the plaintiff. No witnesses were called for the defence, but, upon the plaintiff's case being closed, Mr. Simpson submitted that no case had been made out. His Honor ruled that the words relied on were in substance proved, and gave judgment for the plaintiff. Damages £30. Mr. Meymott, at the termination of the case, stated to the Court that the plaintiff's only object in bringing this action was to vindicate his character, and that therefore he should place the amount of the verdict in the hands of Mr. Antill, to be laid out by him in such charities as he should think fit. Mr. Simpson subsequently applied for a new trial upon the ground that the damages were excessive. The Judge refused the application, observing that he could not stultify his own conduct; either party could have had a jury if they chose, and the defendant's only recourse now was an application to the Supreme Court.

BAXTER V. DENNEEN.

This was a claim for a debt of £44. Mr. Meymott on behalf of the defendant, moved to have the case struck out, on the ground that the defendant was not resident within the district, but at Adelong, and that he had not been there served with a summons. The Judge observed that Mr. Meymott's appearance was an admission of service, whereupon Mr. Meymott withdrew his appearance, saying, that he was instructed by the defendant's wife. The bailiff was then called to proved the service, who stated that the defendant was a farmer in the Picton district, and that his wife and child resided on the farm; the defendant was also a carrier, and frequently absent from home; he (the bailiff) had not seen him for more than a twelvemonth, and when he served the summons on the wife she said that he was at Adelong. The Judge ruled that the service was sufficient, but that if the plaintiff obtained a verdict he should take care that the defendant should have a re-hearing, if he had good ground of defence on the merits. Upon this Mr. Meymott appeared, and asked for a postponement until next sittings, which was granted. Costs reserved. Mr. Wild appeared for the plaintiff.

DAVISON V. MONTGOMERY.

This was an action to recover £20, the price of plaintiff's interest in 25 acres of land sold to the defendant for that sum. Mr. Wild, instructed by Mr. Greer, conducted the plaintiff's case. Mr. Meymott, for the defendant, pleaded, first, the Statute of Frauds; secondly, no agreement; and, thirdly, a set-off. On production of the contract between the parties, it appeared that the plaintiff had agreed to give up the land in question to the defendant, on condition that he (the defendant) "performed all the conditions to which the plaintiff was liable;" no money consideration was mentioned. The Judge observed that, unless the plaintiff could show that the payment of £20 was a condition to which he was himself liable, the first plea must prevail. This the plaintiff was not prepared to prove. Plaintiff nonsuited.

ANDERSON V. GOODALL.

This was an action to recover the sum of £5 19s. for damage done by the defendant's fowls to the plaintiff's haystacks. The defendant gave notice that in his defence he intended first to deny the damage done, and, secondly, that he should rely on a set-off to the amount of £20; the particulars of which were that the plaintiff's cattle and pigs had damaged his garden to that amount.

On the opening of the case, Mr. W. Cary, for the plaintiff, moved that the set-off might be struck out upon the ground that no set-off was allowable in such an action. Mr. Meymott, for the defendant, urged that by the Common Law Procedure Act of 1857, all claims that were, before the passing of that Act, the subject of cross action, might now be pleaded by way of set-off.

His Honor ruled that those parts only of the Common Law Procedure Act, applied to the District Courts, which had been adopted by the District Court Act; and that, even if it were otherwise, the set-off, now offered, could only be allowed by leave of a judge. The set-off was therefore struck out.

Several witnesses were called for the plaintiff, who clearly proved that his haystack had sustained considerable damage from the defendant's fowls. Judgment for the plaintiff, damages £4.

BALLINA.—The town of Ballina has been declared to come within the operation of the Act 13 Victoria, No. 29, so as to constitute it a place at which any fermented or spirituous liquor, or any mixed liquor, may be sold in quantities not less than two gallons at one time.

GRAFTON.—By proclamation, dated 19th July, Grafton has been constituted a municipality.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—The city coroner held an inquest at the Vale of Avoca tavern, Parramatta-street, on Thursday, on the body of a man named Peter Byrne, the publican of the house in which the inquest was held. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased had been a licensed publican for about two years; and during the last twelve months had contracted intemperate habits in the matter of intoxicating liquor. His constitution became impaired, his mind partially deranged, and his energy and aptitude for business destroyed. It further appeared from the evidence that the usual results of such habits—ungovernable passion, cruel treatment, and, as a further sequence, wrecked home and blighted hope and happiness which always follow when the craving for "liquid fire" gains the ascendancy—followed in this case. On Tuesday morning when the deceased rose from his bed he appeared to be more unwell than usual; he left the house in the course of the morning, and it would seem commenced drinking again, as he was subsequently seen in Castlereagh-street drunk and delirious. A gentleman of his acquaintance observing him in that state, succeeded in getting him into an omnibus and had him conveyed back to his residence. He was then laid on a sofa, and subsequently removed to his bedroom. At about ten p.m., he commenced perspiring profusely, and during the night became so violent that his wife, the only person in the house, could not remain in the room. On the disturbance subsiding the wife ventured into the room at five o'clock on the following morning (Wednesday), when the deceased was discovered lying on the floor, dead. Froth was still issuing from the mouth. The furniture was scattered about the room, the sofa was overturned, and the body of the wretched man was lying between the sofa and the wall. He was thirty years of age, a native of Wicklow County, Ireland, had been six years in the colony and two years married. Verdict—Exhaustion by disease, the result of intemperate habits.

PICTON MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—A meeting of the committee was held last night, and, although the weather was very untoward, yet a goodly number of our townsfolk assembled. It was unanimously agreed that our first endeavours should be to raise a sufficient sum, coupled with a Government grant, to put up the building. The plan adopted was that each member of the committee be a collector of names and amounts, payable on (or before, if any person is willing) the first Monday in January, 1860. The members present also agreed to at once place their names down for what they would give, which amounted to £65 6s., and all promised to have their lists of subscribers made up by the 17th of August next, and to that day the meeting stands adjourned, when we expect to have with us the Rev. J. Maher, the Rev. W. M'Kee, and other influential members of our committee. The meeting last evening was presided over by Mr. J. M. Antill, J.P. Mr. W. V. Wild, M.L.A., was also present, and addressed the meeting. There is scarcely an inhabitant of the district of Picton, of the Oaks, of Burragorang, and of Bargo, but takes a deep interest in this institute. Fathers are forced to take their children from school at an early age to assist on their farms, and they require an institution of this kind greatly. Hitherto the public-house has been the finishing school for many, but all are now resolved for a better state of things, and in this district the publicans are quite as anxious for it or more so than others. —Communicated.

WAVERLEY MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

YESTERDAY morning, the balloting papers of those who had recorded their votes at this election on the day previous, were duly scrutinised at the Waverley School of Arts. Shortly before one o'clock p.m., the returning-officer, Mr. Charles St. Julian (accompanied by the two other presiding officers and scrutineers), proceeded to the hustings, where upwards of a hundred persons had already assembled.

The RETURNING-OFFICER stated that the result of the poll which he was now about to announce, was, no doubt, virtually a final one; but that in compliance with the Act the official declaration would not be made until the next morning, at nine o'clock. The votes recorded at this election—as had, after a careful examination, been ascertained—were as follows:—

John Birrell	91
Charles James Smithers	78
Charles Browne	71
Joseph Vickery	64
Charles Simmons	57
William Newland	57
James Vickery	52
Francis O'Brien	51
Joseph Dickson	45
Hercules Watt	45
John Taylor	40
John James Eaton	39
William Barker	38
William Bell Allen	33
Samuel Raymond	31
Cornelius Frederick Edwards	23

As to the first eight gentlemen on this list—Messrs. Birrell, Smithers, Browne, Joseph Vickery, Simmons, Newland, James Vickery, and O'Brien,—there could be no question but that they were elected councillors. The votes, however, for the ninth and tenth were equal, and it therefore would become his very unpleasant duty to decide which of the two was to be returned. This question was one which he conceived ought to be decided, if possible, upon some definite principle, and without reference to individuals. He had known and respected Mr. Watt for many years, and scarcely knew Mr. Dickson, even by sight. But, inasmuch as Mr. Dickson was a resident in the district, and Mr. Watt was a non-resident,—he thought he ought to prefer the resident candidate. He could not, however, then announce his final decision, as the Act required that the official declaration should not be made until the following day; but he might as well say that his present intention was to return Mr. Dickson.

Mr. H. WATT, on coming forward, shook hands warmly with the Returning-officer, and expressed himself as well satisfied as if the decision were in his favour. He thanked those who had been good enough to vote for him, and said he was quite satisfied to be himself out as his friend Mr. O'Brien was in.

Mr. J. BIRRELL, in addressing the electors, observed that he was placed in a position (at the head of the poll) which he certainly had not expected, and was afraid that he hardly deserved; nevertheless, he would, at all times do his utmost to merit the confidence which they had reposed in him.

Mr. C. J. SMITHERS also briefly returned thanks to the electors for the honour which their suffrages had conferred upon him, and intimated that he would always make it his study, whilst in office, to advance the general interests of the municipality.

Mr. C. BROWNE also returned thanks, in suitable terms, declaring they had placed him much higher on the poll than he had expected to be; he stated that he was fully prepared to do all in his power to merit the confidence they had reposed in him.

Mr. JOSEPH VICKERY thanked the electors for having returned him, and especially thanked several of them for having worked for him so energetically. But for that opposition which had been got up against him in various quarters, he would doubtless have been higher on the poll. As it was, in the face of the bunching which had been practised, he had scarcely expected to be returned at all.

Mr. CHARLES SIMMONS returned thanks; he expressed also his conviction that the electors had, on this occasion, returned the nine best men.

Mr. W. NEWLAND then briefly returned thanks, and confessed that he was peculiarly gratified at the mark of confidence which had been given him, considering that he had been so short a time in the district.

Mr. JAMES VICKERY likewise expressed his acknowledgments—he would, during his brief term of office, so watch over their interests as to merit re-election at their hands in February next.

Mr. F. O'BRIEN returned thanks, but intimated his deep regret that the electors should have rejected some of the best men. He would have preferred to have been himself one of those put aside rather than see Mr. Hercules Watt—one of the first residents in the district—cast out. He said he had already asked the Returning-officer if he (Mr. O'Brien) could not retire in favour of Mr. Watt;—but the Returning-officer had told him that it could not be done. He would tell them candidly that he would never appear before them as a candidate for re-election unless they should be prepared at the same time to elect Mr. Watt. As a conclusion to his speech Mr. O'Brien produced two fine specimens of vitrified quartz, and assured the electors that there was a quarry of that material in the neighbourhood of Bondi, at least 150 feet in depth, out of which they could make their roads.

Mr. JAMES VICKERY returned thanks on the part of Mr. Dickson, who had been compelled to go elsewhere, or he would doubtless have been present and so ready to thank them in person.

Mr. W. B. ALLEN thanked the electors very heartily for rejecting him, and said he thought they had elected the nine best men. He should never have come forward, but that several of his friends had urged him to do so, and he accordingly did not feel himself at liberty to decline so doing.

On the motion of Mr. BIRRELL, seconded by Mr. H. WATT, the thanks of the electors were awarded, by acclamation, to the Returning-officer, for the manner in which he had conducted the election.

The RETURNING-OFFICER thanked the electors for the mark of confidence thus bestowed upon him. He had endeavoured to act impartially, and in so doing, to use the best of his judgment. He felt glad they were all satisfied. He begged, on his part, to compliment them on the strict order and propriety which had been maintained throughout the election—notwithstanding the deep interest which it had evidently excited. He would take this public opportunity of testifying his thanks to all the candidates and their scrutineers for the courtesy and kindly feeling which they had uniformly exhibited.

Three cheers were then called for, and heartily responded to, for the Queen, three more for the nine councillors, and the same for the defeated candidates, which terminated the official proceedings.

It is understood to be likely that Mr. Dickson may personally apply to the Returning-officer for leave to retire in favour of Mr. Watt. In that case it seems probable that Mr. Hercules Watt may even yet be returned.

SYDNEY POULTRY CLUB.

THIS very useful and interesting exhibition took place on Tuesday and Wednesday, at the Temperance Hall, and was well worthy of the attention of the citizens. The attendance on the first day was much larger than on the first day of any previous exhibition. Many persons from the country who came to Sydney to attend the Musical Festival, availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the Exhibition. Owing to the inclemency of the weather on Wednesday the visitors were not so numerous.

It is an institution which should not only be supported, but which commends itself to public support on account of the effect it will produce in improving the different breeds of domestic poultry. The Exhibition which has just concluded, shewed a marked improvement in breeding and rearing, more so, in fact, than could have been supposed to have been effected within such a limited time since the formation of the Society two years ago.

The attractions of the Exhibition were the Spanish fowls. Beautifully bred, we cannot but be thankful for the careful training which many of the members have bestowed on this class of poultry. The Dorkings were also remarkably fine, and there were several pens of game fowls and light Cochins which deserve high commendation.

Of the turkeys we saw two from Mr. Moyse inferior to few we have seen in the colony.

A more beautiful pair of white geese, exhibited by Mr. Holroyd, could not be displayed. They took the first prize, but deserve comment from their singular beauty and superiority. They were only eighteen months old, and were bred at Newtown. Mr. Holroyd also took the second prize in geese with a pair from the same clutch. The same gentleman exhibited several pens of ducks, including two of white Aylesbury, which deservedly took the first and second prizes for their exquisite symmetry and beauty. Some Muscovy ducks were also exhibited of a very fine description.

Amongst the attractions of the exhibition were a pair of Chinese pheasants in splendid plumage, the property of Mr. Alfred Denison; and a Victoria crowned pigeon, from New Guinea, the property of his Excellency Sir William Denison.

The President's prize of £2 for the best pen of birds exhibited, was awarded to Mr. Holroyd, for his pen of Dorkings, to which was awarded the first prize. The Judges also awarded to Mr. Holroyd the Society's prize of £5 for the best collection of not less than five different varieties of poultry, exhibited by any one person, that gentleman having obtained eight prizes out of eleven pens of birds exhibited for competition. On the whole the exhibition was very creditable and satisfactory.

The following is a list of the number of entrances and prizes awarded:—

Extensive as is the iron trade of this colony, it will be seen, by these returns, that the imports of Victoria more than double ours. Rapid, indeed, has been the sister colony's increased demand in one of the most important markets of commerce. An import which, in one year—1857—had reached to upwards of a million sterling, amounted, in the four years 1850 to 1853, to very little more than one quarter of that sum!

In directing attention, in our former article, to the extent of the Australian colonies' demand for iron and steel, we had chiefly in view the comprehensive steps which have been taken by the Fitz Roy Iron and Coal Company to enable them to work their rich mines at Mittagong. But a suggestion which is submitted in the lately published Report, by Mr. Thomas, upon the present condition of the Works, induces the consideration of a still more extensive field of action—as respects the making available other rich iron deposits in various parts of New South Wales. Mr. Thomas directs the attention of the company to the profit to be confidently expected from the export to Europe of their finest ores; instancing the unusual degree of interest attached, during the last few years, to the manufacture of iron in England, owing to the great difficulty experienced in obtaining a superior quality of metal for heavy ordnance. The latest European journals apprise us of the immense operations in the construction of malleable iron guns of a calibre not attempted before the Crimean war; and, in England, the question has been very strongly discussed of late, as to whether iron and coal, being munitions of war, can be fairly furnished to France and Russia by a neutral power. "Fifty years ago," says the Times, "no one would have dreamt of including those items among warlike supplies, but the introduction of steam has raised them to equal importance with powder, lead, or any of the other materials whose export is usually prohibited in time of war." It must be remembered, that in Russia scarcely any scientific enquiries have been instituted as respects that great country's iron and coal resources; in fact, she was, at the latest dates, making large purchases of coal in England, the orders of her London agents being to take what they could get, irrespective of quality, price, or port. In France, the limited carboniferous fields do not yield generally a sufficient amount of carbonate of iron to render its extraction a matter of much profit—with the exception of the iron works of Decayenville, in the basin of Aveyron. France therefore depends on England, Belgium, Sweden, and North America for iron, and England and Spain for coal. From the surpassing richness of our iron ores, and the immense extent of our coal formations, we might confidently anticipate to share largely in the European trade, were well-digested plans carried out with the view of ascertaining the capacity of these extensive iron and coal-fields, which, though known to exist in many parts of New South Wales, have not yet been carefully examined. We may here remark that the long-cherished hopes of our Victorian neighbours, in respect to the existence of carboniferous formations in that colony, are now shown to be useless. Mr. A. R. Cecil Selwyn, Government Geologist, having, after a long and careful survey, just reported unfavourably as to the slightest indications of coal strata in Victoria. Yet, five years ago (as stated in these columns), a lady, the owner of land at Geelong, was induced, on the representations of an unskilled speculator, to sink no less than £6000 in sinking for coal.

In considering the advantages to be derived from disposing in European or intercolonial markets of the best iron ores of New South Wales, without reducing them by smelting operations to the metallic state, we would observe (as did Mr. Thomas in respect to the Mittagong ores) that such a procedure would obtain profitable and immediate returns, and that, too, at no other outlay at the mines than the payment of a few quarrymen; who, if paid according to the amount of ore sent to Sydney, would require no expensive superintendence. This system of quarrying has been found to answer in regard to the granite for metalling the streets of the city; and it might be applied, with the same satisfactory results, to the procuring iron ores.

The question then arises, as to where extensive iron fields may be profitably worked in other locales than Mittagong. The geological composition of the Australian Agricultural Company's estate in the district south of the Manning River, would, from careful examination, appear to promise abundant yields of iron ores. It is traversed by high mountain ridges, which may be regarded as the farthest projecting spurs of the main body of the dividing range; to whose character, as well as to that of the country on the Upper Peel, it indicates near relationship. In a report by Mr. Frederick Odernheimer, to the Australian Agricultural Company, he thus describes the geological features of this locality:—"The mountainous district of the Manning contains frequent quartz veins, observed partly outcropping, partly indicated by their detritus in creeks and rivers. The researches for metallic ores have, however, not met with success. Still, it is recommendable to continue further minute researches over the whole district. It is also to be considered, and requires continual close examination, that the district of the Manning resembles, in its geological character, the decided gold countries in the neighbourhood. Although several trials have been unsuccessful in discovering gold, the question is by no means to be regarded as wholly negatived."

"In the whole district, farther south from the Manning, and occupied by the coal formation with accompanying porphyries, no trace of metallic ores, with the exception of iron ore, could be discovered. Traces of iron pyrites have been met with in the dioritic and in metamorphic rocks. The iron ore found in the district is of the same nature as generally found elsewhere within the boundaries of the coal measures, especially in the Shales in the immediate neighbourhood of the coal seams, or between the layers of coal, forming together one seam. The iron ore consists principally of carbonate of iron, changed towards the outcropping by the influence of disintegration, to hydrate of iron oxyde. Traces of iron ore have been seen in the detritus of creeks in the Manning district, but could not yet be opened in situ. There is little doubt that iron ore (red oxyde of iron, and brown hydrate of iron oxyde) will be discovered in workable beds in this locality, as the traces found actually indicate, and as it has been seen, apparently in rich quantities, when examining the Company's Squatting Station of Giro and Nowendoc, higher up the Manning."

In the lowlands, in the vicinity of the harbour of Port Stephens, iron ores have been found, whose richness ranges from 50 to 65 per cent. of metallic iron, but no steps have yet been taken to ascertain whether they may be met in sufficient quantities to be of economical importance.

Proceeding further northwards, there is every reason to expect, that, at the head of the Fitzroy River, iron ores will be found in abundance. Mr. Stutchbury there met with coal measures whose superstratum consisted of a conglomerate of cornelians, agates, quartz, jasper, and fossil wood, shales; then layers of conglomerate, with iron ore and blue clay. These formations were found upwards of a hundred miles up the Fitzroy; and from Port Curtis, so far back as 1854, Sir Charles Fitzroy sent to the Paris Universal Exhibition some valuable specimens of iron ores and iron stone. Mr. Stutchbury made every exertion to test the auriferous claims of the Port Curtis district as respected profitable mining, but without success; and whilst he thought, there was little doubt that, hereafter, gold will be found in the tributaries at the head of the rivers between Wide Bay and Port Curtis, he distinctly pointed to the coal and iron mines as the great fields for successful operations. Had Mr. Stutchbury's valuable description of the Port Curtis country been generally available, and not confined to the very limited impressions of a parliamentary paper, how much bitter disappointment might have been averted when the rush to Rockampton took place; whilst what profitable investments might there not have been made in iron and coal mining in the extensive basin of the Fitzroy? To the inexhaustible ridges of limestone, and quarries of marble, whose granular texture, or whose foliation and beautiful viens, vie with, if they do not even surpass, the statuary marbles of ancient Paros, or modern Carrara, Mr. Stutchbury also invited attention; but, with the exception of some specimens sent to the Paris Exhibition by Captain O'Connell, Government resident at Port Curtis; and to England by Mr. Charles Kemp and Mr. Patten, no practical action followed, as to the development of these resources of wealth.

Returning to the main subject before us, we may observe that the principal sources of the iron of commerce are the oxides and carbonates of the metal, which, mixed with variable quantities of silicious and earthy matters, are abundantly met with all over this colony. The anhydrous peroxide of iron, or red hematite, which also frequently receives the name of specular iron ore, is very abundant—occurring in crystalline and stratified rocks, and the purer varieties in the older formations. The bisulphuret of iron, or iron pyrites, although not treated metallurgically for the metal it contains, and consequently not, properly speaking, an iron ore, is, nevertheless, an important mineral, on account of the sulphur which it yields. Assays of various specimens found in different parts of the colony, and sent to England, have declared their component parts to be, on an average, 45·74 of iron, and 54·26 of sulphur. It is found on the Fitzroy and Peel Rivers, the Manning, and Port Stephens, and in many parts of the western and southern districts.

With these proofs that iron ores are to be found in almost all the yet explored coal basins of the colony, can a doubt be entertained that the profitable results to be ensured by their exportation will much longer be lost sight of? Of the extent of our carboniferous regions, the Rev. W. B. Clarke thus speaks; having adverted to the districts in which his own researches were made, he adds, "And if we take into account the facts stated by Sir T. L. Mitchell, in his history of the explorations of the far interior, and the existence of the same carboniferous formation, not only in various parts of the littoral districts of Victoria, but especially the Grampian Mountains, westward of the 143rd meridian, it becomes manifest that there is no country on the globe occupied to so large an extent by one formation, America excepted, as Australia; and, with trifling exceptions, nearly the whole of the enormous areas occupied by these carboniferous beds belong to New South Wales."

EXECUTION OF JOHN NORRIS.—The old man named John Norris, convicted at the last sitting of the Central Criminal Court of the crime of rape on a child six years of age, suffered the extreme penalty of the law within the precincts of the gaol at Darlinghurst, yesterday morning. Precisely at nine o'clock, the under-sheriff, accompanied by the gaol chaplain (the Rev. P. P. Agnew), the visiting surgeon (Dr. West), and several other persons proceeded to the condemned's cell, and summoned him forth. His arms were then pinioned, and he walked through the yard and ascended the scaffold with a firm step—his demeanour fully bearing out what we were subsequently told by the chaplain, namely, that he entertained no fear of death. The rope having been adjusted, and the cap drawn over his face, the bolt was withdrawn, when the wretched man fell and expired without the least apparent convulsion. After being suspended the usual time, the body was taken down. Subsequently an inquest was held, as per Act of Council, and the body was interred in the usual way. Norris was about sixty years of age, and, from the information afforded us by the clergyman who ministered to him, it would appear that he was a monomaniac. The culprit informed the clergyman that he arrived in the colony as a prisoner of the Crown, having been sentenced to fourteen years' transportation for poaching. This information, on being investigated, proved to be correct. He appeared to have been a quiet inoffensive man in his general conduct; and told the clergyman that the only crimes he had committed was the poaching for which he was transported, and occasional drunkenness. With regard to the crime for which he stood condemned, he said he might have committed it while under the influence of drink, but that he had no recollection of it. He was intelligent beyond the general average of convicts, but his extreme deafness rendered conversation and religious instruction very difficult. He could read well, and frequently engaged in reading the Scriptures and in devotional exercises, in which he appeared to be deeply in earnest. It was on religious subjects that his mental derangement evinced itself. He appeared to be under an impression that God was always with him, and frequently talking with him—which latter impression is ascribed in some extent to his deafness, whereby he would be subject to hearing a variety of indistinct sounds which he might not be able to satisfactorily explain. It is worthy of remark that he had been an inmate of the Asylum at Tarban Creek for insanity. On the morning of his execution he appeared more earnest than usual in his devotions, and expressed himself indifferent to his impending fate. He seems to have identified himself with our Saviour, for just before he was summoned from his cell he remarked that they were going to crucify their Lord and Master. It was understood that he had no relatives in the colony.

NEWCASTLE.—Mr. George Tully's store, at Newcastle, has been appointed a place for bonding goods which have not paid duty on the first entry thereof.

PICTON.—THE WEATHER.—Our correspondent reports that early on Wednesday morning a steady and genial rain commenced along the line of country from Berrima to Camden, and probably further each way. The fall continued steadily throughout the day, increasing to heavy rain as night approached, but without wind. The cattle in the paddocks along the road were almost screaming with delight, having probably a foretaste of spring grass, as we, their fellow-mortals, have of asparagus and green peas—and ducks, remarks my fellow-traveller; meaning to append that addition both to the creatures now receiving enjoyment, and to those hereafter to give it.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

WE have Adelaide journals to the 15th instant.

GEOLOGICAL.—Mr. Selwyn's geological tour of the province has resulted in disappointment, that gentleman having neither found coal nor gold, and his report being unfavourable to further efforts to increase our supply of water by artesian boring. It is certainly some consolation to know the worst, but the public will scarcely receive with satisfaction the official destruction of their fondly-cherished hopes. We fear, however, that Mr. Selwyn's report must be accepted as final, for no question can be raised as to the competency or perseverance of that gentleman, and his words leave very little doubt with regard to the impression produced in his own mind by the visit just drawn to a close. We shall not attempt to sketch Mr. Selwyn's tour, as his preliminary report is sufficiently brief to be quoted entire. It as follows:—

PRELIMINARY REPORT by A. C. Selwyn, of a Geological Survey of Portions of South Australia.

Adelaide, July 1st, 1859.—Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that I returned to Adelaide last evening, having completed a hasty geological examination of as much of the colony as I have been able to visit during the limited time I have had at my disposal.

The country visited and examined embraces portions of the counties of Hindmarsh, Sturt, Adelaide, Eyre, Light, Gawler, and Stanley; passing north by Mount Remarkable to a few miles west of Port Augusta; thence through the Flinders Range as far north as the latitude of Mount McKinlay and Mount Serle; thence east to the basin of Lake Torrens, returning south by Mount Chambers, the Siorns, Black Rock, and the Burra.

I regret that I shall be unable to report favourably on either of the three very important points to which my attention has chiefly been directed during this examination, namely, the existence of profitably workable gold or coal fields, and the practicability of obtaining water, in the northern districts, on the artesian principle.

Though there are certain localities, chiefly within the settled districts, which I shall refer to in my report, where I think trial for gold might be made with a reasonable hope of success, I am, notwithstanding, of opinion that no great extent of gold-producing country will ever be discovered in South Australia.

No indications whatever of coal, or even of the presence of carboniferous rocks, are to be found in any portion of the Province that I have visited. If any such exist, they must be sought either east of the Murray or west of Port Augusta.

The artesian well principle will not, I think, for reasons which I shall point out in my report, be found applicable, or to be depended on as a means of procuring water in any of the districts I have visited. Ordinary wells, dams, and artificial pools and reservoirs will, I think, generally be found to be a less costly and more certain means of obtaining a sufficient supply of good water.

Having already somewhat exceeded the period of my leave from Victoria, I have the honour to request that you will excuse my sending in a final report before quitting the colony, as it will take some time to prepare; it shall, however, be forwarded as early as possible after my return to Melbourne.

I have, &c.,

ALFRED R. C. SELWYN,

Government Geologist, Victoria.

The Hon. the Commissioner of Crown Lands, Adelaide.

It will, of course, be necessary to wait until the full report is forwarded, before arriving at an absolutely final conclusion on the various details of the question; but enough appears in the above to damp if not to destroy the expectations that prevailed before Mr. Selwyn's visit, and out of which expectations he was specially sent for from Victoria. We were not sanguine of his finding gold, although we were hopeful of the discovery of carboniferous formations, and still more sanguine of the possibility of gradually introducing an extensive system of irrigation by means of artesian wells. But all these hopes now blighted, for we can scarcely anticipate that any advantage would accrue from a further examination, sufficient to justify further expenditure; and the chapter of accidents affords but slender chances of disclosing what a careful scientific search has failed to bring to light. We are therefore thrown back on the copper deposits of the province for mineral operations, and are, as heretofore, dependent upon the winter rains for our year's supply of water. All our explorations have the same unfortunate issue; and by the time Captain Crawford returns from the Barrier Ranges the public will doubtless be quite prepared to suspend for a considerable time to come all further expeditions of this description.—Advertiser.

DEFENCE.—The Attorney-General, on Thursday afternoon, moved the House of Assembly into committee, for the purpose of resolving upon an address to his Excellency, praying for steps to be taken to organise rifle corps in this province, and also to afford to the Parliament an opportunity of expressing its loyalty towards her Majesty and the Imperial Government in the present critical state of European affairs. We need scarcely say that the loyalty of the Attorney-General met with hearty support from the loyalty of the Parliament. Our report of the debate—if debate we may call what was all harmony and common consent—will relieve us from the necessity of going over the ground taken by the various speakers; but with regard to one point in the proceedings we are desirous of saying a word. The Government intend to propose the establishment of either a militia or volunteer corps of riflemen—the Attorney-General was not very clear which. He spoke, however, of "uniforms," and of "drill sergeants," and in this way conveyed the idea of an intent on the part of the Government to resuscitate the old volunteer companies, and to try once more the "game of soldiers." Let them try it: possibly they may succeed in placing a sum on the Estimates for marching and drilling. But if inserted this year, it will probably be disallowed next year; and even if it were continued from year to year, the object really contemplated would not be attained. Nearly every able-bodied man in the colony would be glad to practise rifle-shooting; but the farce of universal soldiering will end in disappointment. Time is too valuable, and the tax upon the energies of the people too heavy in this colony to admit of the game of soldiers being generally popular. The rifle every one will like; the drill-sergeant only a few; shooting at the target, practising distances, competing for a prize at a grand annual demonstration, will attract thousands; but pipeclay and buckram, and right-about-face, will repel as many as the other would attract. Let it not be supposed that we wish to deprecate organised military defence. It would be simply ridiculous. But in this colony we ought to attempt as nearly as possible to arm the whole able-bodied male portion of the community; a consummation devoutly to be wished, but impossible to be realised if none but "soldiers" are to carry arms. Perhaps the Government might combine the organisation of a trained volunteer force, with the distribution of rifles apart from the regulations appertaining to military bodies, because the great desideratum undoubtedly is to qualify all the able men of the colony for taking part in its defence. In the ranges and timbered districts of the colony, and even in the bed of creeks and behind sandhills, an irregular body of good shots might harrass an enemy by guerilla attacks even more than the direct assault of a drilled company, and therefore, without discouraging the latter, we should like to see the former attempted. It may also be worth while to consider whether we could not place one or two of Armstrong's guns in favourable position on some commanding points of approach. All we can do to guard our coasts, as well as to protect our towns and villages, we are bound to do; but it will none the less devolve upon Britain to maintain a naval power in the Pacific, sufficient to protect the most valuable portion of her colonial empire from attacks to which, as independent states, they would not be exposed.—Advertiser.

THE VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—On Thursday morning Lieutenant Gibson, who has recently arrived here from Melbourne for the purpose of imparting to the Military and Volunteer Companies which may be formed a knowledge of musketry, and particularly of the rifle, drilled the military in the Barrack-square, in the presence of his Excellency the Governor and several members of the Government. Lieutenant Gibson explained to the men the defects of the old musket and the theory of the new weapons which had been placed in their hands, presents from the Imperial Government, which have so long been lying in store, and which turn out to be Enfield, not Minie rifles, as supposed by many. The men having been lectured for some time, Lieutenant Gibson proceeded, by questioning them, to ascertain the result of his efforts, and it was gratifying to observe that his pupils were exceedingly apt in acquiring a theoretical knowledge of the new weapons. They were then subjected to what is termed position drill, and after an hour's practice acquired considerable proficiency. The drill will be repeated every morning till next Thursday week, when there will be a grand review, and the men will be called upon for the first time to fire with the new weapons. Before that time, however, there will be a day set apart for ball practice on the beach, particulars of which we will communicate to our readers as soon as the arrangements shall have been matured. At present, we believe that Thursday, the 21st instant, is the day spoken of for the purpose.—Ibid.

THE INTERCOLONIAL TELEGRAPH.—The intercolonial messages through the Central Office, at Adelaide, amounted on Tuesday last to more than £230. We do not know what Wednesday's receipts were, but we are in a position to state that long and costly messages were retained in town through want of resources on the line. The completion of the second line of wire is therefore greatly to be desired.—Ibid.

SOUTH AUSTRALIAN ORANGES.—Some oranges, taken home by Mr. Bailey, in the Orient, and grown in the Hackney Nursery, were exhibited at the Chiswick meeting of the London Horticultural Society, and took the first prize. They were in excellent condition, and attracted considerable attention. We extracted a paragraph about these oranges from one of the English papers by the last mail, but did not know then that they had taken a prize, nor that they had been taken to England by Mr. Bailey. —Register.

NEWCASTLE.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

JULY 22.—MUNICIPAL ELECTION.—The election of nine aldermen for this city, under the Municipal Act, took place yesterday, than which no wetter day visited this quarter for years, nor one less adapted to the comfort of those engaged in out-door business, as electioneering exclusively is. Notwithstanding, however, that the rain poured down in one incessant torrent from early morning until night, and that a strong gale of wind drifted it fiercely against the persons of those exposed to it, the polling was carried on with considerable spirit in the several wards, the interest in the result having considerably increased during the consecutive previous days. The candidature of some of the gentlemen proposed was, however, merely nominal;—thus, Mr. Rancland, whose business engagements do not permit his giving his time to public matters at present, was busily engaged during the morning in canvassing against himself—that is, in requesting his friends not to vote for him, and then, perhaps, to subject him to payment of the fine for declining office. Mr. Rouse adopted the same course, while Mr. M'Cormack did not move at all in his own behalf. Mr. Kemp's absence in Sydney since his nomination deprived him of his chance of success. At half-past nine o'clock this morning, the Returning-officer, Dr. Stacy, met the electors in the Court-house, and said that the Act did not permit the official declaration of the poll before to-morrow (Saturday), but that in the meantime, in order to satisfy the public interest in the result, he would state that the gentlemen returned, stating them in the order of the number of votes for each, were—for City Ward, Messrs. Hannell, Tully, and Richardson; for Macquarie Ward, Messrs. Adam, Turton, and Bolton; and for Honeysuckle Ward, Messrs. Corlette, Tighe, and Fleming. Mr. Hannell having suggested that the Returning-officer might perhaps give to-day the number of votes for all the candidates, independent of the official declaration, so as to save the time of those present and a second attendance on their parts to-morrow, the meeting was adjourned for half an hour for that purpose; after which, if in time for the steamer, I will send you the result with this.

COUNTRY NEWS.

CARCOAR.—The complimentary ball given to Mr. W. R. Watt, M.L.A., and his family, came off on Wednesday evening last, and created a large amount of bustle and activity in our little town. Mr. Watt, accompanied by his family, drove into town, in the early part of the day, in three carriages, attended by a large number of gentlemen on horseback. The ball took place in the large room of the National School-house, which was brilliantly illuminated and decorated for the occasion, and refreshments were served in the class-room. The company began to arrive in quick succession about nine o'clock, and very soon numbered about eighty, comprising all the leading families of the town and neighbourhood. Shortly after nine o'clock the guest of the evening entered the ball-room, and was most cordially received. Dancing then commenced, and quadrilles, polkas, valses, schottisches and galoppes followed each other in quick succession. A supper composed of all the delicacies procurable at this season was laid out in the class-room. Mr. S. Meyer proposed the health of the guest of the evening, who responded to the toast in a neat and graceful speech. Supper and the toasts over, the ballroom assumed its former gay appearance, and, the band having struck up a polka, dancing recommenced, and was kept up until Aurora tinged the eastern sky with roseate hues.—Correspondent of Bathurst Free Press.

KING'S PLAINS DIGGINGS.—The diggers are well employed in this locality; but it is no use for men without capital, to enable them to hold out for a time, to think of going there. Gold in abundance exists, and is sure to reward the patient seeker. An instance of this has been narrated to us. A party having worked a claim for four or five weeks without success, were about to abandon it, when they resolved to take out another load of stuff; they had scarcely re-commenced their work before they came upon a nugget a pound weight.—Bathurst Times.

THE CANOBLAS COPPER MINE.—We understand that the new company commenced their operations at this mine last week, and, we are confidently informed, with every prospect of ultimate success. In accidentally removing a small quantity of soil from the surface of the ground, some very rich samples of copper ore were discovered, and the whole region appears to be impregnated with the same metal. Several specimens of very beautiful character have been forwarded to us, some of which are blended with malachite, and amply bear out the reports which have already reached us relative to the richness of this mine.—Bathurst Free Press.

THE LATE MAIL ROBBERY.—The audacious robbery of the Bathurst mail is still causing great excitement, both the parties implicated being well-known to most persons in the neighbourhood of Ironbark. William Day has been living at Ironbark during the past two years, with the exception of an occasional absence of a few weeks at a time, and up to the period of his leaving that place, about four weeks since, has borne the character of an industrious, persevering man, and a clever mechanic; working hard both early and late for the support of his wife and family of four children. Such a sudden and entirely unexpected termination to what we all believed to be a course of honest industry has taken all persons here quite by surprise. Previous to his settling at this place, where proofs of his industry still remain in the shape of a forge, workshop, two slab huts, and a garden fenced-in, Day worked on the Turon for five years—the greater portion of the time as pump and cradle maker—and saved a considerable amount. About seven months ago, shortly after Day had completed the second slab hut, he started for Ophir, returning with Robert Wilson and family, to whom he gave possession of his old dwelling. Various rumours are afloat as to Day's motive for fetching this man, but the true one remains to be discovered. It appears, however, that Day and Wilson were mates of old. When trade was slack at the forge or gunsmithing, Day and Wilson generally employed themselves at digging, and it was a remarkable fact that they were invariably fortunate, or in other words had a constant run of good luck,—if Day opened a piece of new ground, he always found gold in paying quantities, whilst others could get none.—Bathurst Free Press.

FINDING OF A LARGE NUGGET.—The little township of Tarrangower has been startled by the finding of two nuggets, one of which weighed one hundred ounces, and the other twenty-one. The first was discovered by a Chinaman near Sandy Creek, and was found near the surface. It had a very handsome appearance, and showed in several places the marks made by the fortunate celestial while using his pick. The second nugget was found at Porcupine Flat by one of the puddlers, who started off to Castlemaine and disposed of his find at one of the banks of that place, for the purpose of keeping his secret perfectly safe; but the matter oozed out, and the ground has been since visited by considerable numbers of Europeans and Chinamen.—Colonial Mining Journal.

THE REUNION BALL.—On Tuesday night the ball for the benefit of the hospital fund took place at Mr. Booth's. There were present more than a hundred of the ladies and gentlemen of the town and district. The affair was the most brilliant that ever took place in Braidwood. The room was elegantly decorated with ferns interspersed with artificial flowers. The supper table was abundantly supplied with every delicacy of the season. Dancing was commenced at eight o'clock, and was kept up with great spirit until a late hour the following morning.—Braidwood Observer.

PEDESTRIANISM.—On Thursday evening last an off-hand match was made between Frost and an unknown to run 100 yards for £5 aside. It however resulted in Frost receiving forfeit—the unknown not making his appearance. On Friday evening there was a strong muster at our old friend Pat Sweeney's, to witness the making up of another match between Chamberlain and Frost (the heroes of the last race here), the distance to be 300 yards over four hurdles three feet high. The race, which it is supposed will cause intense excitement, is fixed to come off over the Araluen Racecourse, on Saturday, the 30th instant, at 3 p.m. £10 a-side was deposited with Mr. Sweeney, and a second deposit of £20 a-side is to be made on Saturday next, the remainder £20 a-side to be made good on the day of the race. Each party and their respective backers seem confident of success, and both are gone into training.—Braidwood Observer.

IRONBARK.—The correspondent of the Bathurst Free Press, writing from this district, says:—The intelligent special reporter for the Sydney Morning Herald paid us a visit of nearly a fortnight's duration a few weeks ago, devoting a considerable portion of that time to the patient examination of the auriferous quartz reef abounding in this neighbourhood. As this gentleman is no mere theorist, but a gold miner of many years' experience in California, Victoria, and New South Wales, his report is daily looked for with great interest by all parties anxious for the development of the reef. The truth is that quartz mining here is still languishing for want of a crushing machine sufficiently powerful to crush for all parties working the reef. I regret to state that a strong party of thoroughly practical quartz miners from Adelong have been obliged to relinquish operations from the above-mentioned cause; the machine lately erected for Messrs. Coombes, at Stoney Creek, being of small power, and, as yet, incomplete.

GOULBURN MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—The half-yearly meeting of members of the Goulburn School of Arts and Mechanics' Institute was held on Monday evening last, at the court-house. There were about thirty members present. The chair was taken at eight o'clock by the president, the Rev. W. Ross. Having stated the object of the meeting, the chairman called upon the secretary to read the report. From this document it appeared that the handsome sum of £541 5s. 9d. had been presented by the ladies to the building fund of the institute, being proceeds of a bazaar held on 24th May last. This donation enabled the committee to procure from the Government the sum of £520 6s. 8d. the balance of the £1000 granted for the building. Contracts have been entered into for the finishing of the main portion of the building, which will be completed without further delay. The number of members reported at the last general meeting was 96, the present number is 84. A letter from Mr. Tute, late collector, was then read, in which he acknowledged himself indebted to the institute £14 8s. 9d., which amount he promised to repay as soon as it lay in his power. Some other formal business having been gone through, the meeting closed with a vote of thanks to the president.—Abridged from Goulburn Chronicle.

BILLIARDS.—On Monday last, a game of 250 was played at the Commercial Hotel, Braidwood, for £5 a-side. The game was level at 200. There was little betting on the affair; plenty of offers, but no one present felt inclined to take up.

RIFLE CORPS.—The Goulburn Herald states that a rifle corps is projected in Goulburn, under the auspices of the Masonic body.

ACCIDENT.—One of our Goulburn contemporaries reports that, on Saturday last, Mr. William Frost, a farmer residing near Tiranna, was returning home after selling a load of hay, driving two horses in a dray. At the Argyle Steam Mill he stopped to speak to Mr. Conolly, and while thus engaged some one cracked a whip, which caused the horses to bolt. Frost succeeded in getting hold of the shafter's head, but was thrown down and struck with the horse's feet and the wheel passed over him, breaking two, if not three, of his ribs, and terribly bruising him about the back.

NEW ROAD TO GOULBURN.—A meeting, presided over by Mr. James Graham, was held last week at Shoalhaven, relative to the Goulburn Road. It was well attended, the parties present appearing very anxious to hear the full particulars of the route. Mr. Moss read a note to the meeting signed by Surveyor Rowlands, whose opinion on the road appeared to be quite satisfactory, and was received with applause. The following resolutions were unanimously passed—"That the thanks of this meeting be conveyed to the Minister of Works, and to the Surveyor-General, for their prompt attention to the interests of the district, in so expeditiously facilitating the survey of the new line of road from Shoalhaven navigation to Marulan;" "That a copy of the resolution just agreed to be transmitted without delay to the Hon. John Robertson and Colonel Barney;" and "That a subscription list be opened for the purpose of defraying the expenses of two tomahawk men to open a bridle track along said road."—Illawarra Mercury.

THE FINE ARTS.—The Goulburn Chronicle of Wednesday last states that Mr. Richard Noble, a student of the London Academies and of the Academy of Painting in Flanders, had just arrived there, and had been invited to paint the portraits of fifteen ladies and gentlemen of the town of Goulburn.

SURVEY OF LAND.—Surveyor Parkinson has been measuring for some time past at Cabbage Tree Creek, and in the vicinity of the Barren Flat and Nowra Hill; so, I presume, we shall shortly have a good supply of land in the market to meet the demand. All the measurements will be a short distance from the town of Nowra. I perceive that several town lots adjoining the sections of land reserved for public purposes, in Nowra will be offered shortly for sale.—Correspondent Illawarra Mercury.

BEGA, TWOFOLD BAY, July 8.—Our correspondent writes:—Wheat sowing is being prosecuted here with energy, the late rains having been very seasonable for the purpose. We have been visited for the last two days with the same description of windy weather that was found so unpleasant a few weeks since.—A number of bullocks, belonging to various individuals in our neighbourhood, have died very suddenly within the past few weeks. Although it is the worst part of the year, and the feed very bad indeed, it is not the general opinion that it is to be attributed to those causes alone, on account of the suddenness of the event. It is very desirable that some of the animals should be examined after death, as that might, and doubtless would, help to clear the mystery. It is possible that in consequence of the shortness of the usual feed, grass, and the practice of the animals eating large quantities of corn stalks, potatoes, and other unusual substances (which they have only learnt this present season) their powers of digestion have been effected sufficiently to account for the calamity referred to.—Illawarra Mercury.

ROAD TO APPIN, VIA RIXON'S PASS.—The formation of that portion of the road being opened between Illawarra and Appin, via Rixon's Pass, between the top of Bulli and Appin, is being rapidly proceeded with by Mr. Hayward, the contractor. Only a few miles of the line near Appin require to be formed. As it is now, a vehicle can be taken over it, and it is an excellent road to travel over on horseback. Last week, Mr. A. Mackenzie, of Ellengowan, drove a spring cart from Appin to his residence in a little over four hours, and on Tuesday morning last several gentlemen rode from Appin to the top of Rixon's Pass in about one hour and forty minutes, reaching Wollongong in ten minutes under three hours from Appin. These facts speak for themselves as to the length and state of this road.—Mercury.

THE FORTHCOMING HARGRAVE BANQUET.—The tickets for this festival are being eagerly taken up. Mr. Davis, who has the providing of the material portion of the banquet, is also making every preparation to render it complete. Alderman Haworth is pushing on with vigour the completion of the large Hall in which the banquet is to be held.—Illawarra Mercury.

THE WEATHER.—After several days lowering and threatening, rain commenced to fall on Wednesday morning and continued during the day. From appearances at Wollongong, it is general, and likely to continue. It will do a great deal of good to the farmers.—Mercury.

RAILWAY STATION NEAR APPIN.—On Monday, an important meeting was held at the Bourke Hotel, Appin, Mr. John Bray, J.P., in the chair. The object of the meeting was to memorialise the Railway Commissioners to establish a station at Moreton Park, on the off-side of the Menangle River, about three and a half miles from Appin. The resolutions, which were of an elaborate character, set forth that the distance from Wollongong—by Rixon's Pass, and the new line of road, now in course of formation, from the top of the coast range—was something under twenty miles, which, with the distance from Appin to the point at Moreton Park, where the station is sought to be established, would be short of 24 miles. That, in addition to the accommodation such a line of communication with Sydney would be to the inhabitants of the Southern Coast districts generally, it would be of immense advantage to the residents in Appin and the surrounding agricultural population, in sending their produce to market (which, from the statistics named at the meeting, is very large) would materially add to the receipts of the railway. The resolutions were all carried unanimously. A deputation was named to present the memorial to the Railway Commissioners.—Illawarra Mercury.

THE WEATHER.—Our Maitland contemporary says that, on Tuesday night, the dry weather that has lately prevailed was very agreeably interrupted by rain setting in, after some days' promise. Showers continued to fall occasionally on Thursday, but the rain has been, so far, too light to be of much service.

THE MAITLAND MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—Preparations are being made for the ceremony of laying the foundation stone of this edifice on the 26th. It must not be supposed from this circumstance, however, that nothing has yet been done towards the erection of the building. On the contrary, the work has been commenced some time, and nearly the whole of the very substantial foundation has been laid. The proportions of the various rooms can now be seen; and the lecture hall, it appears, will be of very respectable dimensions.—Mercury.

THE NEW COURT-HOUSE.—A movement is on foot to obtain a meeting of the inhabitants of Maitland generally, to consider the expediency of petitioning the Government to erect the new court-house somewhere near the Victoria Bridge, instead of on the Gaol-hill, as at present intended. The principal object of the movement is to endeavour to secure once more the mutual good-will and united action of the two Maitlands, as one commercial community, by placing midway between them the leading public building which both must use on some occasions, such as Circuit Courts; and which it is thought both might use on all public occasions when such a building was the most natural and suitable one.—Mercury.

THE REV. P. KENYON.—Some of the friends and admirers of the Rev. Patrick Kenyon, parishioners of the Sacred Heart and others, sent, in the early part of this year, to England for books to the value of £50, with the view of presenting them to him as a testimonial of their regard and appreciation of his labours in the sacred ministry. These books arrived by the last mail, and were presented to the rev. gentleman last week, at the presbytery of the Sacred Heart Church, by a deputation from the subscribers. Among the books are some which must be of peculiar value to Father Kenyon in his sacred calling, as Gardellini's Collection of Decrees, Ozanam's Works, Works by Father Perrone, &c., &c.; the whole forming a most appropriate present from an admiring body of intelligent laymen, to a clergyman whose learning and good qualities command their respect.—Freeman's Journal.

SUSPECTED STEALING OF BILLS OF EXCHANGE.—On Tuesday, James Tom, a Chinaman, under remand on suspicion of stealing bills of exchange at Braidwood, was again brought before the Goulburn Bench. In answer to inquiries made, the chief constable of Braidwood had written to state that a man named Michael Woods got a draft for £10 from the Joint Stock Bank at Braidwood, on the 10th May last, payable in Dublin, and that about a week afterwards the three bills were stolen from his tent at the Lower Araluen, together with a purse, containing some nuggets of gold. Two bills found on the prisoner are strongly suspected to be two of the three above-mentioned. Prisoner was remanded to the Braidwood bench to be dealt with.

LECTURE AT COLLECTOR.—A lecture was delivered on Monday evening last at Collector by the Rev. J. W. Dowson, Wesleyan minister. It was addressed more especially to the young men of Australia, its object being to enforce upon them the necessity of mental and moral culture. The lecturer also urged upon them to promote by their example the cause of temperance in the country. The lecture was an admirable one, and was listened to with deep attention by one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Collector.—Goulburn Chronicle.

PROPOSED PUBLIC DINNER TO MR. JOHN MORRICE.—The friends of Mr. Morrice have determined on inviting him to a public dinner, on the 28th instant, at Berrima, as a testimony of his worth, and of their appreciation of his career as a country gentleman and magistrate.

THE PAST, THE PRESENT, AND THE FUTURE.

(From the Times, May 14th.)

IN ancient Rome Generals who had finished a successful war rode in triumph along the Sacred Way to the Capitol, but it has been left to the present inheritor of those great traditions to march along the Sacred Way to the field of battle, and to triumph before he has ever fought. Perhaps if Louis Napoleon Bonaparte had been bred a practical soldier and had served with armies in the field before he came to take the command of one at fifty years of age, he would have imitated the ancient Roman in his two qualities of modesty and respect for the enemy. But the Proclamation of the French Emperor breathes only the recollections of the first Bonapartist Empire. That the present French troops are the equals of the Republican warriors, whom the first Napoleon's discipline made so terrible to Austria,—that, on the other hand, the Austrians themselves are the slow pedantic race who fell an easy victim to the great man,—that everything will happen according to the precedents of 1796 and 1800, is presupposed as certain in the Imperial Proclamation. Such a document is, of course, not to be judged as if it were a political manifesto. It is published to inspire courage in followers and to strike terror into enemies, and therefore a tone of confidence, and even of presumption, may be fairly excused. But it certainly seems that the expectation of the French respecting their speedy success is real, and that the Emperor in his address only echoes the voice both of his army and people. The French have won so many victories over the Austrians on the fields of Italy, and they have so completely forgotten the reverses which they occasionally suffered, that Paris, France, and the camp fully believe that the enemy is to be swept completely out of Italy in the first campaign, and that if Germany waits for the next three months before assisting the Austrian army there will no longer be an Austrian army to assist.

There can be no doubt that this confidence has its effect on Europe, and perhaps on the enemy. It is the privilege of France to have completely the ear of other nations, and to be able to represent events pretty much at her pleasure. It is only the educated—those who may be almost called historical students—who know anything about the unsuccessful campaigns of France with any other country than their own. The Treaties of 1815 had been signed, and the world had begun to gather its materials for a history of the great war, before Continental nations knew much about the capitulation of Alexandria, or the battle of Trafalgar, or even of the Peninsular campaigns. The brilliant victories of the Austrians and Russians in 1799 remain entirely obscured by the splendour of Rivoli and Marengo; nor has Aspern left much impression on those who remember every incident of Wagram. This reputation of the French arms is, no doubt, justly earned, for it is at once the tribute due to the valour and the civilisation of the people. And it would be of little danger to Europe, did it not unfortunately blind the French themselves to the difficulties of war. From infancy the Frenchman is nourished in ideas of the martial superiority of his race. From the histories given to the young, national vanity has eliminated every passage which could tell a tale adverse to the national glory. The battles by sea and land with England are passed over almost without notice, as it would be difficult to wrest them into a narrative gratifying to patriotic feeling; while the campaigns against the Continental Monarchies, and especially Austria, are related at a length which leaves little room for anything done in France previous to 1792, or for the political events which have happened since 1815. France, then, and her Emperor enter upon this war with a confidence which may bring success, but which may possibly lead to eventual disaster. It is not our business to be the prophet of evil to either party, yet we may warn the Chief who speaks in so lofty a tone of the victories of his predecessor, that Europe is much changed from the days when a General could overrun a province in a few weeks, beat army after army, and dictate a peace to his beaten foe. War is now on a more gigantic scale; to take the offensive requires larger calculations, a more subtle and reflective genius, greater resources and a greater superiority over the enemy than heretofore. We have been always among the first to acknowledge the high qualities of the French soldier; some of the Emperor's troops, such as the Garde Impériale and the Zouaves, are probably as fine troops as any existing in the world, and he must be a very bigoted reader of history who will doubt the general superiority of the French, with their unity, their nationality, their excellent organisation, and their constitutional quickness and alertness, to the motley armies which a Hess or a Gyulai command. But we would wish to guard our countrymen, ever ready to be led away by such documents as the Manifesto and Address of Louis Napoleon, from speculating on the speedy issue of the campaign. We have observed a tendency within the last few days to fancy that everything is over, and that the war, confined to narrow limits, will be decided by a battle under the walls of Milan. The credulity of the City and that of the West-end are in these things about on a par, and excessive panic one week is balanced by excessive complacency the next. The intelligence, however, which reaches us from Central Europe indicates a stubbornness on the part of Austria not likely to end in a second Campo Formio, while the attitude of the other German States is such that either a French victory or a French reverse might be the signal for an interference in the quarrel. If the French Emperor carries through his plans, obtains at once the neutrality of Gemany, and the help of the Italian people, wins victories in the field such as to shake the courage of the hostile army, and captures fortresses so easily as to terrify the Viennese Government which has depended on them, he will indeed add the laurels of war to the crown which commemorates his civic triumphs. But, though we think his chances of success are fair and trustworthy, yet war is too dangerous a game to be commenced by a novice in a style to which the Great Napoleon proved his right by a constellation of victories.

In strong contrast to the lofty tone of the belligerent emperor is the proclamation of her Majesty our own Queen, declaring the neutrality of the British Empire. Although couched in the formal language which has probably more than once done duty on a similar occasion, the Proclamation speaks in impressive accents to England and the world. It says that this country is disposed to give no help either to the despotism which affects philanthropy or that which takes its stand on cold legality. All the three States which are engaged in this war are without doubt bringing misery on themselves by their unscrupulous ambition or unreasoning obstinacy. France, even if presently victorious, must pay the penalty in increased burdens, a stricter military rule, and the final destruction of every tendency which could lead her back to the forms of free political life. Austria can gain nothing, and, should she even retain what she now holds, it will be at a cost of blood and treasure which a generation cannot replace. As for Sardinia, the instrument of the one and the intended victim of the other, we can see clearly only one thing—that the short-lived constitution which attracts the sympathies of Europe has now passed away, to be replaced by obsequious Assemblies after the Bonapartist type. As for the freedom of Italy, the professed object of this crusade, we can afford to stand aloof and allow it to be accomplished by other hands. We have done our part in the liberation of peoples. The "fond ally which bleeds for all" has too often "bled in vain" for Englishmen to be enthusiastic in this matter. If the Italians can be made happy we shall rejoice at it, and be content to give to France all the glory of the deed. In the meantime, the people of this country will do as their sovereign bids them, and keep out of a contest begun in duplicity and violence, and of which the end is hidden in darkness. In Paris, Turin, or Vienna, our countrymen will abstain from anything which may be construed into active partisanship with the belligerents; no soldier shall be enlisted, no vessel fitted out in these islands, for the purposes of either, and the blockades established by any one over the ports of another will be respected according to the rules of international law. By a strict adherence to this policy we shall be placed in a position to look with calmness on the drama which is now on the point of opening.

THE TOWN AND FORTRESS OF ALESSANDRIA.—Alessandria, or Alexandria, the capital of the province in Piedmont of the same name, and one of the strongest fortresses in Europe, is situated in a rich and fertile plain declining towards the east, 65 miles by road, 46 miles direct distance, E.S.E. of Turin; 60 miles by road, and 48 miles direct distance, S.S.W. of Milan; and 40 miles direct N. by W. of Genoa; in latitude 44·54 N., longitude 8·38 E.; on the river bank of the Tanaro. It extends across the narrow marshy tract formed by the confluence of the Bormida with that river; and has an altitude of 203 feet above the sea-level. This city—which has been styled the Boulevard of Piedmont—was, until recently, enclosed on three sides by a strongly fortified wall, while the extensive outworks ran along the East side of the Tanaro; on the opposite or West side of that river is the citadel, a sexagonal work, which is connected with the city by means of a covered stone bridge of fifteen arches. On the opposite side of the river it is sheltered by a chain of small hills extending from Monte-Calieri eastwards to a bold and beautiful height a little to the North-east of the city, which is crowned with a fine castle and tower. The principal buildings with which Alessandria is adorned are the town and Government houses, which are situated in a handsome square decorated with trees—the Palazzo-Ghilini, the civil and military hospitals, the cathedral, six parish churches, four convents, 14 hospitals and asylums, an academy of arts, several schools, and a Royal college, and a gymnasium. In 1806, its population was estimated at 35,216; in 1855, its population was 21,520, exclusive of the garrison, amounting to 4500. But, taking in the 16 suburban villages lying without the walls, its aggregate population in 1855 was 39,294. It has some spinning mills, and manufactories of silk, linen, cotton, and wax candles. The central position of this city with respect to Milan, Genoa, and Turin—its command of the Tanaro and Bormida, and of several of the most important routes of communication with the surrounding districts, render it one of considerable commercial influence and resort. Its fairs, held in the end of April and beginning of October, are among the most important in Italy. In November, 1857, a railway was opened from Alessandria to Voghara, whence it is expected it will be carried on to Stradella, in the Duchy of Parma, and so unite the Piedmontese lines with the great Central Italian line. Alessandria will thus form the central point of the great trunk or principal railway lines of Sardinia, one of which passes, by way of Genoa, across the Apennines; the second, by way of Turin, to Asti and to Parma; and the third, by Valenza and Novara, to the Lago Maggiore. Alessandria was taken by Sforza, Duke of Milan, in 1522; sustained an unsuccessful siege by the French in 1657, and, after an obstinate resistance, fell into their hands in 1707. The present citadel was begun in 1730 and finished in 1745. In 1796 it made a conditional surrender to Bonaparte. In 1799 it fell before the combined armies of Austria and Russia, and, after the battle of Marengo in 1800, was regained by the French, who expended nearly 50,000,000f. upon its fortifications and retained it until 1814, when the province became a portion of the Sardinian dominions, and the fortifications were to a great extent razed.—Fullarton's Gazetteer of the World.

MR. DRUMMOND, M.P., ON RIFLE CORPS.—The eccentric member for West Surrey, our old friend Mr. Henry Drummond, has just published some brief Remarks on the Formation of Volunteer Rifle Corps, in the form of a pamphlet of just eight pages, and not more. Mr. Drummond claims to possess some knowledge of the matter, from his experience as a commander of rifle volunteers for several years. The best kind of volunteer corps, he contends, are rifle corps, especially for our rural villages, and the hon. and, in every sense, gallant member, proposes to form companies of 50 each at Guildford, Dorking, Reigate, Chertsey, Farnham, and Godalming, all to be united under one or two field officers. No one should hold any "rank" as an officer who has not served in the army of the Queen or the East India Company. One adjutant and one bugleman is all the "staff" required, and for these the public should pay. Mr. Drummond, on the question of uniform, so important a point in the estimation of "smart, vain young men," asserts that it must be cheap, and adapted to all. The hon. member writes as follows:—"The best uniform for a rifle corps, composed chiefly of inhabitants of country towns and villages, is a common round frock, such as is worn by labourers, made so that the collar can be buttoned round the throat, with or without a neck-cloth underneath it, but invisible, with a brown soft leather belt, lined with some waterproof material to hold the cartridges, and black or green wide-awake hat. The round frock of unbleached linen is the most invisible colour; this colour has been adopted by several regiments in the East Indies; it is the colour of stubble, decayed fern, leaves, sticks, &c. It can be worn over or without any underclothing. The pockets in front should also be made of some waterproof material, by which means the caps, powder flask, &c., are always kept dry; food for the day may be kept in pockets similarly made behind. The frock should be open and button in front, and reach to a little above the knees; by which means there will be a skirt under which to keep the rifle dry in wet weather. A small waterproof collar may be carried also to protect the nape of the neck and the top of the shoulders in heavy rain. Each man must procure his own rifle, taking care to choose that which has the bend in the stock best adapted to his own length of neck and arms. In these corps much depends on nicety of details. Lazy slovens are made to be shot, not to shoot the enemy." The value of such small detached corps as those proposed by Mr. Drummond in the narrow roads of England, lined as they are by hedges, ditches, and woods, is obvious. They would effectually check the advance of the main army of an invading force by engaging the sharpshooters and riflemen that would be sent forward by the enemy to drive out our own concealed men. The moral effect of a volunteer corps would also be immense, proving to the invader (whom Mr. Drummond rather gratuitously assumes to be the "ruler of the French") that Englishmen "never will be slaves" under a foreign yoke. Mr. Drummond hopes therefore that "all men who are younger and more active than he now is will apply to the Lord Lieutenant, and take other necessary steps forthwith to effect this most useful object." "If 1,000,000 rifle muzzles," he adds, "lines the hedges between the coast and London, any invader will think twice before he makes his appearance. The people must rise up to defend themselves." So says Mr. Drummond, and his idea is not a bad one.—Times.

In France there are thirteen railway companies, the united capital of which amounts to £120,000,000; in Germany there are fifty-five, the capital of which is £103,200,000; in Russia seven companies only, the capital of which amounts to £55,520,000. Two lines of these last mentioned railways have not yet been opened. The French insurance societies possess a capital of £9,440,000; the German societies of a similar nature £9,760,000; and the Russian only £2,720,000. The mining interest in France reckons forty-nine companies, with a capital of £10,240,000; in Germany 154 companies, with a capital of £20,200,000; in Russia six companies, the united capital of which is £2,720,000. The silk yarn manufactories are eight in number in France, with a capital estimated at £1,280,000; in Russia there are but eight, but their capital is £1,460,000; and in Germany there are thirty-eight, the capital of which amounts to £4,640,000.—The Bulletin.

THE SCUTARI MONUMENT to the memory of our heroic countrymen sacrificed in the late war is at length completed, the inscriptions in English, French, Italian, and Turkish, on the four sides of its base having been finished during the past week. Stripped of its cloud of scaffolding, the structure is now seen to full advantage, with its pedestal, base, and shaft towering aloft nearly ninety feet into the air. Gravel-walks are being laid out through the enclosure, and a lodge for the permanent keeper of the ground is also to be built. When these final embellishments have been completed, the little cemetery will be one of the most picturesque retreats around the capital; besides possessing in the mind of every countryman of the buried heroes within it a painful and tender interest that is all its own.—Levant Herald.

PRODUCE CIRCULAR.

WOOL.—There have been no transactions since last report, and only a few bales have been brought forward, so that there is nothing to test the market.

SHEEPSKINS have been in fair supply, and the demand active, but no improvement in price can be reported.

TALLOW.—A portion of that advertised was not landed in time for sale, but all offered was sold at prices about the same as last week. 21 casks of mutton tallow realised £55 per ton, but the colour was indifferent, and the tallow was not much approved of by the trade.

HIDES.—Considerable quantities have arrived, and there are buyers in the market, but, owing to the inclemency of the weather, most of the large heavy lots were held over till next week. Quotations are repeated.

STOCK AND STATIONS.—Some transactions are pending; holders will not sell except at extreme rates. We are advised that the Philip Island station, with 21,000 sheep, has been purchased by W. J. J. Clarke, Esq., for the sum of £26,000 cash.

STORE SHEEP AND CATTLE.—We have numerous enquiries for forward delivery, but southern buyers look for too large a margin, consequently few sales have been effected.

FAT STOCK.—The supply during the week has been about equal to the demand, but the quality has been inferior. We have sold 4000 wethers, at 29s per head. Current prices may be quoted—Cattle, £4 to £8; sheep, 15s to 20s.

For the information of those wool growers who have been breeding from Mr. Rich's New Zealand rams, we annex the report of the well-known wool broker, Mr. H. P. Hughes.

"London, 30th April, 1859.

"Dear Sir,—Having gone very carefully through your two cabinets, containing 300 specimens of wool taken from your choice breeding ewes, I have much pleasure in bearing testimony to their quality and pureness of character; in fact, with the exception only of two samples, which you intend to throw out, I never inspected so fine a selection of both combing and clothing sorts. The former description, in particular, is in every respect adapted for the spinners of this country, and I feel will at all times command a good competition from our manufacturers.

"I am, dear Sir, yours truly,
"HENRY P. HUGHES.

STOCK AND STATION CIRCULARS.

[RAYMOND AND CO.]

FAT CATTLE.—A limited supply, which met with ready sale, at from £5 10s to £8 10s. Second quality, £4 upwards. Prime cattle scarce.

FAT SHEEP.—This market still continues good for prime quality. We quote prices for wethers, 16s 6d to 18s; second quality, 13s to 15s, with an upward tendency.

STORE CATTLE.—An increased enquiry for well-bred lots, at from 43s to 47s; all bullocks, from 60s to 65s; deliverable at Maiden's Punt, for mixed lots, 70s to 80s; all bullocks, from £4 10s to £4 15s.

STORE SHEEP.—A good enquiry continues for good sound sheep, but few offering for sale. We quote prices for good young breeding ewes, 13s to 15s; second class, 10s to 11s 6d.

STATIONS.—Good runs near a market, not overstocked, are much enquired for, and sell at remunerating prices.

HORSES.—Useful harness and heavy draught command good prices, but the supply this last week of such description has been very small.

WOOL.—The small supply of wool offering precludes any transactions worth reporting.

TALLOW.—The increased supply this last week has caused prices to rule a shade lower—say for beef, £42 to £45; mutton, £52 to £56 15s; station, £46 to £51.

HIDES.—A lot of first quality, sound and heavy, for shipment, realised 19s 3d. They may be quoted at from 7s to 18s.

Lyons'-buildings, George-street, Sydney, 22nd July.

[THOMAS DAWSON.]

Fat cattle fully maintain last week's quotations, with, if any, an upward tendency; buyers evincing an inclination to give advanced rates.

Fat sheep are in demand, and buyers are enquiring after flocks on the station at full rates—say for good prime wethers 18s to 20s.

STORE CATTLE AND SHEEP.—Many enquiries have lately been made for both descriptions of stock, at an advance on my former quotations, but I have heard of no sales of consequence taking place.

HORSES.—There is a brisk demand for good conditioned animals fit for shipment, and for saddle and gig purposes, but very few of the right stamp are brought forward.

Milch cows and springers are very saleable.

Homebush, and 421, George-street, Sydney, July 22.

BREWSTER, REA, AND CO.

Our Melbourne advices this week intimate that purchasers of store stock there are holding back, owing in some considerable degree to the banks in that city curtailing their accommodation, arising from the apprehensions connected with the European news, and buyers are, in consequence, demanding longer terms in their payment.

The half-holidays in Sydney this week, in connection with the Festival, combined with the wet weather, have kept business transactions in some cases from coming to a close. As we anticipated last week, we have found little disposition in either buyers or sellers to bring their negotiations to a conclusion—each taking hesitating views of how markets are likely to go. We have heard of no transactions of importance having taken place, and have only, ourselves, closed for one lot of mixed sheep, at 12s, on the station.

In fat cattle, prime quality, are worth 20s per 100 lb.; but the supply of inferior is still much in excess of first-class cattle; prices may be quoted at £3 10s to £6 10s.

Fat sheep have a slight upward tendency, and prices range from 14s to 18s.

We quote store cattle as under—
Bullocks, 3 to 6 years, on the station, 55s to 60s.
Ditto, ditto, at Dubbo, 60s to 65s.
Ditto, ditto, at Deniliquin, 85s to 87s 6d
Equal sexes, 2 to 7 years, on the station, 40s to 45s
Ditto, ditto, at Dubbo, 45s to 50s
Ditto, ditto, at Deniliquin, 70s to 75s
Mixed lots, from 6 months and upwards, on station, 35s to 40s.
Squatters' Exchange, Sydney, 22nd July.

SYDNEY LABOUR MARKET.

GOOD farm servants, especially single men or married couples without encumbrance, are in good request at our currency, as at foot. The late new arrivals are mostly cleared off. The last shipment per Lady Emma Bruce are still in quarantine. The demand for mechanics for the country—such as blacksmiths, wheelwrights, and rough carpenters—is rather on the increase. Female domestic servants are not so scarce as of late.

	Per annum.
Married couples	£45	to	£60
Single farm labourers	25	to	40
Bushmen and rough carpenters ...	35	to	45
Blacksmiths and wheelwrights	55	to	70

Shepherding families	55	to	60

SPENCER ASHLIN, general labour and commission agent, 139, Pitt-street, opposite Union Bank.
Sydney, 22nd July.

THIS market presents no features deserving particular notice. The emigrants by the Queen of England have been pretty nearly disposed of, and those by the Lady Emma Bruce (335), in quarantine, are not quite ready, but may be on hire next week. Meantime, we have many very likely hardworking hands, and rather better supply of female servants suitable for the country, waiting to be engaged at the following current rates, viz.:—

With board and lodgings, or hut-room and rations;—per annum:—

Carpenters and blacksmiths	......	£50	to	£75
Grooms and coachmen	......	40	to	60
Cooks and gardeners	......	40	to	60
Bushmen	......	35	to	40
Teamsters	......	40	to	50
Married farm labourers (both employed)		45	to	55
Single ditto ditto...	......	25	to	30
Ploughmen	......	30	to	35
Married indoor couples	......	50	to	75
Single female servants	......	20	to	30

W. B. HAIGH, 120, King-street East.
Sydney, 22nd July.

The supply of labour this week has been of a general, and, on the whole, a tolerably, good description. The emigrants per Queen of England who did not hire on board have been applying at our office for employment—the married couples per above ship find difficulty in being engaged, having young families, and not agricultural servants. The passengers by the Lady Emma Bruce have not yet been released from quarantine, but are expected to be the early part of next week. Engagements at our office this week have been of the following description, and rate of wages—namely,

Farm servants, single, £30 to £35 per annum
Married couples, £45 to £60 ditto
Rough carpenters, £60 ditto
Garden labourers, £35 to £40 ditto
Bushmen, to split posts and rails, 22s per 100
Bricklayers, 12s per day, for country
Female cooks, £25 to £30 per annum
Laundresses, £30 to £36 ditto
Housemaids, £20 to £26 ditto
General servants, £20 to £26 ditto.
J. C. GLUE, 163, Pitt-street.

HORSE MARKET.

MESSRS. BURT AND CO. report no particular alteration in the horse market. As usual, at this time of the year, the demands are confined to horses in good condition and suited for immediate uses. Draught stallions are much enquired for; nothing first-class in the markets. Our late sale have been fairly attended, although the supplies from the country districts are limited. Prices have not altered.

MR. CHARLES MARTYN reports: The horse market has not been very brisk since last report, the heavy rains which fell during the week having caused a suspension of the usual auction sales for a time. Transactions were for the most part limited to private sales at prices similar to those mentioned in former reports. The market is very bare of all descriptions of stock; and useful horses are very saleable, if young and in good condition.

MAITLAND MARKETS.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

FRIDAY, JULY 22.—Trade is still dull, with but little prospect of improvement until the settlers require their supplies. After the very sharp frosts we have had both morning and evening for some time back, we had, as is usually the case on the breaking up of the weather, a heavy rain, which commenced on Wednesday evening, continued all Thursday, and is still threatening. The months of July and August are those in which the settlers on the alluvial banks of the Hunter most dread the visitation of floods. As it is, from the rain now fallen, the roads are almost impassable and few teams from the country can be expected for some time, and no teams will start upwards until the weather settles.

Tallow, 42s to 44s per cwt. in brisk demand; soap, 42s per cwt.; candles, 7d per lb. wholesale.

Hides are sold at from 9s to 14s each; calfskins, 1s 6d to 2s; sheepskins, 6d to 7d per lb; horns, £1 5s per cwt; shankbones, £3 to £3 5s per ton, but in little demand.

Wheat is very scarce, and little offering; the millers are offering from 9s to 9s 6d per bushel, but the settlers are holding on, and are asking 10s per bushel. The millers, however, are well supplied at the low prices which ruled at the commencement of the season, and do not care about buying at the advanced rates.

Maize is offered freely at from 2s 9d to 3s per bushel; Cape barley, 4s to 4s 6d per bushel; lucerne seed, 1s 9d to 2s per lb.

Lucerne hay is bought at about £3 10s per ton, and oaten hay at from £4 to £4 10s per ton.

Flour (mill prices)—Fine, 26s; seconds, 24s; bran, 6s to 8s per 100 lbs.; bran not in brisk demand.

Bread, 7d per 2 lb. loaf.

Farm Produce.—Colonial bacon and ham, 6d to 7d per lb.; Vindin and Co.'s smoked hams, 10d per lb, wholesale, retail 1s per lb; lard, 8d to 1s per lb.

Dairy Produce.—Fresh butter, 2s per lb.; salt butter, 1s 6d to 1s 9d per lb; cheese, 5d to 6½d; eggs, 1s per dozen wholesale; milk, 4d per quart delivered.

Vegetables.—Potatoes, 8s to 10s per cwt.; onions, 6s to 8s; cabbages, 3s per dozen; carrots and turnips, 4s per dozen bunches; pumpkins, 2s to 3s; vegetable marrows, 2s to 2s 3d per dozen; crammers, 6s per dozen; green food, 1s per dozen bunches.

Poultry.—Fowls, 2s to 2s 6d per pair, wholesale; ducks, 3s to 3s 6d; geese, 8s; turkeys, 10s to 12s.

Fruit.—Oranges, 5d to 8d per dozen; lemons, 5d to 7d; citrons, 5d; colonial jam, 1s per lb.

Leather Market.—Maitland sole leather, 1s per lb.; Sydney sole leather, 1s 2d per lb.; kip, 2s; colonial calf, 4s 6d, French calf, 6s per lb.; basils, 15s to 18s per dozen; kangaroo skins, 50s; black and brown harness leather, 1s 3d per lb.

Coals, at the ships, from 10s to 12s per ton.

Timber Market.—Cedar, in log, 13s to 13s 6d per 100 feet; joists and scantling, 15s; flooring and weatherboards, 16s; battens, 15s; palings, 12s per hundred; posts and rails, £3 12s per hundred; ironbark shingles, per thousand, £1 to £1 3s; laths, per thousand (colonial), 11s.

WEEKLY PRODUCE CIRCULAR.—Wheat, 9s to 9s 6d, scarce; maize, 2s 9d to 3s; lucerne hay, £3 to £3 10s, dull of sale; oaten hay, £3 10s, very little in the market; potatoes, new, 8s to 10s per cwt.; ditto old, 5s ditto; onions, 6s to 8s ditto, plentiful; cheese, per lb., 5½d to 6½d; bacon and ham, 6d to 7d; lard, 8d to 10d per lb.; sheepskins, 7½d per lb.; hides, 11s to 14s; calf skins, 1s 6d to 2s; tallow, 42s to 44s per cwt.; wool, none.—D. The amount of gold coin issued by the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint during the week ended to-day, July 22nd, has been 20,000 sovereigns.

The quantity of gold-dust imported into the same establishment during the week for the purpose of coinage has been 7778 ounces.

The Western, Southern, and Northern Escorts have arrived during the week from the several gold-fields and delivered at the Sydney Branch of the Royal Mint the following quantities of gold dust:—Western: From Sofala, 750 ozs. 19 dwts.: Bathurst, 251 ozs. 9 dwts. 4 grs.; Louisa Creek, 717 ozs. 12 dwts. 5 grs.; Tambaroora, 215 ozs. 17 dwts. 21 grs.: Stoney Creek, 165 ozs. 10 dwts.: Orange, 87 ozs. Southern: From Goulburn, 239 ozs. 2 dwts. 6 grs.: Braidwood, 2463 ozs. 19 dwts. 5 grs.; Tumut, 2733 ozs. 17 dwts. 6 grs. Northern: From Rocky River, 782 ozs. 17 dwts.; Nundle, 462 ozs. 13 dwts.; Tamworth, 103 ozs. 16 dwts; from Port Curtis, 34 ozs. Total, 7548 ozs. 2 dwts. 23 grs.

The Share Market has been rather inactive this week, and the transactions that have taken place have been small. Holders of Bank Stock appear more desirous to realize at present rates, but as yet no sales have been made at lower prices. Sydney Fire Insurance shares are very firm, and have improved about 6d. per share. The following are the rates at which sales have been effected. Australian Joint Stock, £15 per share, with right to new shares, £13 per share, ex div. and new shares; new shares, £2 10s. per share. Australian Steam Navigation Company, £15 5s. per share. Newcastle Coal and Copper Company £25 paid, £23 15s. per share; £23 10s. paid, £22 6s. 6d. per share. Sydney Insurance Company 32s. and 32s. 6d. per share.

Government debentures are steady, and terminable are in some demand for remittance to England. The high rates of exchange on London has tended to increase the value of these securities. Terminables due in 1876 have been sold this week at 102½ and interest. Interminables are dull of sale. Australasian Steam Navigation debentures, due in 1859, have changed hands at par and interest.

The news by the Royal Charter, to the 21st May, shows that the English funds continued to be depressed and unsteady. The closing quotations of Consols were 91¼ to ⅜, being a quarter per cent. lower than they were on the 18th May.

Business during the week has been very dull, and the transactions that have taken place are unimportant. There are several causes for this dulness in our markets. Firstly, the musical festival; secondly, the recent failures that have occurred; and, thirdly, the inclemency of the weather. Besides this, the character of the late news from England is such as to cause the most rash speculators to be cautious in their transactions, because it is evident that, as long as the war continues, money must necessarily become tighter, and the accommodation afforded in time of peace will have therefore to be somewhat restricted.

FLOUR.—The market continues without any alteration. The rise in Melbourne has not been fully sustained, but prices rule higher than they do here. It is strange, however, that, notwithstanding this difference in prices, vessels from Adelaide prefer bringing their wheat to this market. The millers continue to quote fine flour at £27 per ton; seconds, £25 per ton; wheat, 10s. to 10s. 6d. per bushel.

LIQUIDS.—Ale and porter: The demand for bulk beer is steady and first-class brands command from £7 to £7 15s. per hogshead. Porter in bulk is not quite so scarce, and prices are unaltered. Bottled beer and porter are without any alteration. In wines we have not heard of any transactions this week. Brandy is pretty firm, and Martell's is quoted at 11s. to 11s. 3d. Rum: The speculation noticed last week has almost ceased; but prices remain firm; 30 o.p. is worth from 4s. 6d. to 4s. 9d. Geneva is not so much in request, and prices are a shade lower; JDKZ is quoted at 15s.; and Key at 15s. 6d. Whisky in bulk continues dull of sale.

TEAS.—There has not been much doing in teas this week; good congous, ex Marion M'Intyre, have realised from £8 15s. to £9 5s. per chst.

RICE.—The market is firm, notwithstanding the arrival of the Kemanglen with a large quantity of rice. Patna is worth from £21 to £21 10s per ton. Java is not much in request, and is dull of sale.

METALS.—The market for general ironmongery is pretty steady, and, although business has been dull, prices remain fully equal to last week. Bar and hoop iron are not much sought after, and dull of sale at £11 per ton for the former, and £11 10s. per ton for the latter. There is still a good demand for corrugated galvanized iron, and prices rule from £28 to £32 per ton. Muntz metal is saleable at from 12d. to 13d. Ewbank's nails are firm, and holders are not disposed to sell except at an advance of 5 per cent. on last prices. Sheet lead is worth from £28 to £30 per ton.

BUILDING MATERIALS.—The market continues without any alteration. Richmond cedar is in some request, and we have heard of sales at 21s.

GOLD NEWS.

(From the Braidwood Observer.)

WE were glad to learn, on our visit last week to the gold-fields, that mining matters are progressing favourably. Where the pick and shovel are at work from the Church and School lands to the Upper Araluen, satisfactory yields are being obtained, and in some instances small piles made. At the Upper Araluen matters are taking a turn. At the "New Rush," near the Rose and Crown, the diggers are in expectation of reaping a golden harvest. The dispute as to boundaries has not yet been settled. Mr. Ardill, the surveyor, has struck a line, but we understand that the commissioner has written to the Surveyor-General, requesting him to direct one of the Government surveyors to define the boundary. A subscription list has been set on foot by the diggers, in recognition of Mr. Ardill's services. Should that gentleman succeed in establishing the claims the diggers holding the miner's right advance with respect to certain ground in this locality, no doubt he will be amply remunerated for his labour. On Favourite Flat the population is decidedly on the increase. At Sweeny's Flat, we found mining matters prospering. Extensive stripping is going on both sides of the creek, between the Carver's and the "Cornstalk," and behind that house. We hear that a Miners' Medical Benefit Society is about to be formed at the Araluen. Diggers purposing to become members will be required to pay one shilling a-week, which will entitle the person to medical attendance and medicine. A committee will be formed, in whose hands the management of the society will be confided. Two shares in the Greek's claim were sold last week, for £240, and were bought in by the partners; this is the third claim below Hawkes'. Notices are posted up that gold is worth £3 14s. 6d. an ounce, and at that price the storekeepers are purchasing it. At Mudmelong the claims are turning out well; the miners are getting short of water, but there is still sufficient left for the present purposes. Those claims that have been opened at Merricumbene are turning out satisfactorily, but as yet nothing has been found that should induce anyone to quit payable ground elsewhere. A reef has been discovered at Serjeant's Point, Little River, by five Germans. We are informed that the specimens taken up are very rich, and it is to be hoped that some enterprising person will put up a crushing machine, so that the reef can be effectually worked. The parties at Tantulean Creek are doing exceedingly well; Rourke and Coleman may be mentioned as being amongst the most successful. We observe that some miners from Sawpit Gully have settled down in this quarter. At Warrumbucca there is steady mining business doing. We had almost forgotten to mention that at Long Flat the Chinamen are buying up the puddling machines, and erecting new ones. Hamilton's is under offer. There are about fifty Chinamen about the flat. We hear from a reliable source that Currowan Creek is about to be prospected. Mr. Dunophan, a practical miner, lately a resident at the Lower Araluen, has undertaken to prospect the Creek, and Mr. Carter, of the Clyde Hotel, has engaged to find a month's necessaries for the parties so engaged. May success attend the movement!

THE SOCIAL EVIL:

A VOICE FROM THE STREETS.

Respectable piety, warm and well fed,
Come out from thy luxury—leave thy down bed;
Come, thou stern moralist, come thou with me,—
Virtue untempted come hither and see!
The streets are all empty, deserted, and still,
Save the plash of the rain, dripping dreary and chill;
No sound greets the ear but the watchman's dull tramp,
And the whistling scream of the flaring gas lamp.
But mark there the shivering presence that stands,
Striving 'neath that thin shawl to keep warm its cold hands;
A nameless thing, painted, and haggard, and wild—
A something that once was an innocent child—
With a smile on its lip and despair in its eye,
And a forced laugh that suddenly breaks in a sigh;
A mask of coarse rouge, half washed off by the rain,
On the sunken cheek, hollow with hunger and pain;
And a voice by consumption all broken and low,
Speaking words of allurement in tones full of woe.
Aye! though shivering that form, the heart's colder I wis;
Stern moralist, tell me: What think'st thou of this!
I warrant thou spurnest this daughter of shame,
Would'st treat her with scorn, and contumely, and blame;
Would'st leave her to starve when her fleeting charms fail.
Stop! thou judge of thy sister, and hark to her tale:

"I was young and untainted by guilt and disgrace,
And despair had not set his foul stamp on my face;
My poor widowed mother's sole pride and delight—
I sung gaily all day, and slept soundly all night.
But he came, and I loved him—God knoweth how well!—
And I heard his soft wooing, and listened, and fell.
He deceived me, and left me to shame and despair,
And I followed to find him—I little recked where.
And here to this foul crowded city I came,
All alone, knowing nought of him only his name;
Despairing, uncaring, bewildered, half-crazed,
No asylum before me, no helping hand raised;
No home but the streets, and no rest till the grave,
No refuge,—Yes! one—the dark river's cold wave.
Ah! it tempts me full often, as smoothly it flows,
In its black murky current to fly from my woes;
But I dare not, the fearful Beyond fills my heart,
I live wretchedly on, though I long to depart
From this dreadful existence, this dull aching pain,
This misery, that rests such a weight on my brain.
Oh! the horrible streets! all so lonely to me,
Though lively and bustling stern listener to thee;
While the stream of life past me goes rushing and loud,
I stand all alone in the midst of the crowd.
But no more of this,—give! give me money I pray,
That my soul in oblivion with drink I may lay.
The poison they vend in yon gin-shop shall be True Nepenthe, true water of Lethe for me."
Thou weepest, stern moralist! let us away.
Adieu! Hie thee home with what stomach thou may.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.—A considerable number of the members of the debating class of this association assembled yesterday evening, for the purpose of discussing the question—"Ought the city to be endowed?" It was opened in the affirmative, and the majority of the succeeding speakers also supported that view of the question. The cities of Melbourne and Adelaide were instanced as possessing the advantages of endowments of valuable lands, &c., whereas the lands, wharves, &c., in and around Sydney, with which the city should have been endowed, had been sold, and the proceeds appropriated by the general government. It was urged, however, that those lands approximate to the city which still remained in the hands of the Government, should, without delay, be handed over to the City Corporation. For the negative it was argued that the improvements and repairs required in the city should be paid for by the citizens, who alone reaped the benefit. On the question being put from the chair at half-past nine o'clock it was carried in the affirmative.

AT R. Muriel's, Wynyard-street, this day, Saturday, furniture, engravings, Chinese ornaments, platedware, &c., &c., at 11 o'clock; and at 12 o'clock, an incubator, and a quantity of prize poultry, rabbits, pigeons, &c., &c., &c.—ADV.

MONEY MARKET AND CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Friday Evening.

The English Funds opened this morning without any recovery from the decline of a quarter per cent. which took place yesterday, and the market was heavy throughout the day, the fiscal bargains being a further reduction of ⅛.

There was no news, and the prevailing dullness seemed to be chiefly owing to the almost total absence of business.

Consols were first quoted at 91½ to ⅝, and after having touched at 91⅛, they left off at 91¼ to ⅜. The Government broker bought £5000 New 3 per Cents.

Bank Stock closed at 219 to 222.

The Times thinks it may be considered almost certain that the month of June will have begun before any great blow is struck in Italy.

Telegraphic despatches from the seat of war are no longer to be published in the official journal of Rome, on the pretence of observing perfect neutrality.

The Emperor of Austria, accompanied by Baron Hess, left Milan on the 19th of May, for Pavia.

The French Government has entered into a contract with three large colliery companies at Mons, for the supply of 15,000 tons of coal, to be delivered at Brest and Cherbourg, for the use of the French navy.

The Globe, of 21st May, thus sums up the war news: "We have at length a French official account of the position of a portion of the French army; but whether it is that part which is going first into action, or whether it is mentioned with a view of withdrawing the attention of the Austrians from more important movements on the part of divisions of the army which are not named, remains to be seen. According to this telegram, which is dated Alessandria, May 19th, the Emperor, on that day, inspected the first and third corps d'armée of the French army at Tortona and Ponte Curone. Both of those places are situated to the south of the River Po, and on the line of the great road and railway from Alessandria to Voghera, Stradella, Pavia, and Piacenza. Tortona was formerly a strong fortress, belonging to the kingdom of Piedmont, but the citidel was blown up by the French in the year 1796. Ponte Curone is a village, with a bridge over the Curone—one of a multitude of small streams which flow from the Appnnines into the river Po. They are both within a dozen miles of the Austrian position—between Bronia and Stadello. A circumstance which renders it likely that this is a serious movement is, that the Austrians were rapidly collecting on the opposite side of the Po. We mentioned yesterday that the Austrian head quarters had been removed from Mortara to Barlasco, which latter place is about a dozen miles from Tortona, but on the north of the river. French and Piedmontese accounts, received yesterday, also state that the Austrians had abandoned Vercelli, and that the Piedmontese took possession of that place on the afternoon of Thursday."

All these movements appear to announce the approaching of a great struggle for the possession of Milan. Before the French obtain the possession of that city, they will have to fight a great battle, and to force the passage of the deep and wide river. In proof of their ability to affect the latter object, the French telegram of yesterday mentions that the fire of their artillery from the south bank of the river, had dislodged a body of Austrians from a position which they had taken on the north bank, near the railway bridge at Valenza.

The French have captured several Austrian vessels.

Later intelligence from India was received last night, by the Marion, from Calcutta.

The news is unimportant, except as showing the gradual pacification of India.

SIERRA LEONE.—We hear from Sierra Leone, west coast of Africa, that the tribe of Loosoos have been again encroaching on our frontier, and have had the temerity to burn the next largest town to Sierra Leone, on the very river on which that colony stands. It was absolutely necessary to check the daring of this warlike tribe, as property was no longer safe on the river, and mercantile confidence was shaken. The mild administration of British rule is imputed by these savages to weakness, they considering themselves safe in their muddy rivers, where the pestilential fevers of Africa protect them more surely from the white man than all the guns they could bring into the field against us. An expedition was fitted out at Sierra Leone to attack the Loosoo stronghold up the great Scarcies river, where they arrived on the 21st of March. The force consisted of Her Majesty's steamers Vesuvius, Trident, and Spitfire, having on board his Excellency Colonel Hill, Governor of Sierra Leone, with the 1st West India Regiment, and Commodore C. Wise, aide-de-camp. The following account of the expedition is given by a correspondent:—"The steamers not being able to enter the river, the ascent was made in boats, as follows:—24 troop boats, in four divisions, under the charge of,—first division, Commodore C. Wise, with boats of her Majesty's ship Vesuvius; second, Commander F. A. Close, with boats of her Majesty's ship Trident; third, Commander Truscott, with boats of Heron; fourth, Lieutenant Chapman, with boats of her Majesty's ship Spitfire. Grand total, 52 boats—including six boats carrying guns and seven rocket boats. The ascent of the river was most difficult, and it required the energy of every naval officer to keep the troop boats off the rocks and in their places. On the third day we found ourselves only a few miles from our destination—viz., the stockades and mud forts of Kambia Town; but the most difficult part had now to be passed. Before us lay the river, rushing through a bed of rocks, the points of which were so numerous and so near together that it seemed impossible to pass. Never shall I forget the scene that then ensued as the cloud of boats, freighted with their living cargoes, were swept into the rapid; the noise of the waters nearly drowned the shouts of the officers. Pilots were useless; before they could speak you were driven past or on the danger. It reminded me very much of a large hunting field charging a dangerous and difficult leap; some are pounded, some are still flying along, taking warning from those in difficulties; some are trying to stop, not liking the look of the leap. How they all get through is a mystery, but at last it is accomplished; the danger is past, the stockades are in sight, and the boats anchor to re-form the broken line of battle, while Commodore Wise goes ahead to reconnoitre the enemy. Once more the bugles sound the advance. In ten minutes we open fire, and under a storm of shell and rockets the 1st West India Regiment and Marines land with a battery of mountain howitzers; the boats now turn their fire upon the main stockade, and the troops advance; the second division of boats pass higher up the river and pound away at a stockade on the extreme left, while a storming party under Commander Close makes a rush for the wall; but the Loosoos now think they have had enough, and run so fast that nothing but a rifle-ball can catch them. The day was nearly a bloodless one, but, like the work in India, the sun is far more to be feared than gun-shot wounds in latitude nine degrees north. The heat was frightful, and after the last skirmish we had in chase of the Loosoos, I saw his Excellency Colonel Hill, who commanded the troops, being brought to life again by means of bottles of water poured over his head. The attack had been made at the top of high tide, and as it was impossible to perform the service in one tide thoroughly, the boats had of necessity grounded in the mud under a cliff on which the stockades and mud fort were built. Our fleet of boats had certainly rather a helpless appearance, but as the troops occupied the mud forts they were safe; nevertheless, the enemy were not blind to the advantage they had, for after dark they peppered the boats with musketry from the opposite bank. On the 24th, the troops were re-embarked, and in course of time got back to the steamers. Kambia was left in the hands of our neighbours and allies, the Timnees, from whom the ever-oppressing Loosoos had wrested the town by treachery. The expedition has had the happiest effect on the country, for which Government deserve every credit, and I am glad to say that as yet the troops have not suffered from fever, which might have been expected after their exposure to the sun and malaria in open boats."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SYDNEY MORNING HERALD.—IN RE JAMES FRYER'S INSOLVENCY.—SIR,—Through the medium of your valuable journal, I desire to make known the treatment I have met with and the abuse to which I have been subjected in a vain attempt to establish a just claim at the Insolvent Court.

I am a creditor in the above estate to the extent of two thousand pounds, for which I hold no security. After the termination of a frivolous and vexatious proceeding, termed an examination under a Judge's order, having no other object than the squandering of the few remaining assets left in the estate, at the instance of my legal adviser (Mr. R. J. Want) I called a special meeting for the purpose of proving my claim, which was held on Wednesday the 13th instant. At this meeting Mr. Husband (who is the attorney employed by Mr. Mackenzie, the official assignee) objected to my claim, and thereupon his Honor the Chief Commissioner directed that it should stand over until the third meeting, which was fixed for the 15th instant, in order that the official assignee might investigate the account, and be made aware of the facts and particulars.

For this purpose I waited upon Mr. Mackenzie on the 14th instant, and again by my agent on the following day, being the one fixed for the third meeting. On each occasion he evaded me by stating that he was very busy, and had no time just then, but if I thought proper I might leave the cheques and promissory notes, for which he would give me a receipt. Being desirous of affording him every facility, and giving all the information in my power, I left the papers and expressed my willingness to wait upon him whenever it might be convenient to compare them with my account, and explain every item satisfactorily.

The last interview took place at 10 a.m. At 12 o'clock, the official assignee, attended by his legal adviser (Mr. Husband), entered the Court, and to my great surprise read an elaborately written report, in which he stated that after a careful consideration of my account he was unable to understand it. It was at once manifest to me that he never desired or intended to understand it, and notwithstanding I was there prepared to comply with the letter of the law, as laid down in the 26th section of the Insolvent Act. The Chief Commissioner objected to my debt, which I must now either totally abandon, or incur a serious expense necessary for an appeal to a higher tribunal.

Trusting that I may never appear again at the Insolvent Court under the present administration,

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

FRANCIS SMITH.

R. P. RICHARDSON has received instructions to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Bank-buildings, George-street, on MONDAY, 25th July, at 11 o'clock,
All that parcel of land, known as JERRAWANGALA, situated in the county of St. Vincent, containing 850 acres more or less, bounded on the north by the village reserve at Wandawandean, and on the east by that creek. About 80 acres are cleared, have been under cultivation, and are enclosed with a new substantial three-rail fence, and subdivided into five paddocks.
This valuable property is within 25 miles of Shoalhaven, and is close to a navigable river and Jervis' Bay. The approach to it is by a good road, either from Braidwood and Ulladulla, and it is well known as a grant from the Crown to Charles John Campbell, Esq., being an early selection in the year 1840.
The attention of those seeking an agricultural property in a favoured locality is directed to this valuable block of land.
It is watered by the Wandawandean Creek (a never failing stream), and surrounded by a large tract of Government land, which renders it especially valuable for dairy or breeding purposes, and for the latter it presents a capital opening, as it is well known that at the present time springers readily find purchasers in the immediate neighbourhood for £10 to £12 per head.
The improvements are also worthy of notice—80 acres being cleared, fit for the plough, and enclosed with a substantial new fence; indeed, a large sum has already been expended on this property, which will enable the purchaser to enter at once into a most remunerative farm and homestead.

☞ In bringing this truly valuable city property into the market for bona fide sale, Mr. Richardson is desirous of attracting public attention to the many advantages it possesses in position, in the substantial nature of the buildings, and the connection and important business it commands, which latter may be considerably extended if desired.
The situation will be acknowledged to be about the best stand in this populous portion of the city: close to the Queen's Wharf, Circular Quay, Miller's Point, the wharves in Darling Harbour, and the whole of the business section of the city.
Cumberland-street is also the main outlet from the densely populated north-end of Sydney, and thus enjoys a very large traffic.
The hotel was built by the proprietor under his own personal superintendence, in a most substantial manner, neither expense nor labour being spared in its erection. Most of the walls are 18 inch and 14 inch brick work, outside cemented, parapet elevation, and remarkably well spouted and guttered; the inside plastering three coats, and a number of the rooms oil painted, windows hung, and otherwise well finished.
The business the property transacts, and is capable of doing, needs but little comment; and, from the extent of the premises, a grocery, provision, or, indeed, any other establishment, might with great advantage be conducted in conjunction with the hotel, as in no other part of the city can so sure and paying a trade be with confidence relied on.
In conclusion, intending purchasers are invited to judge for themselves, and inspect the property, and every facility for so doing will be afforded by the proprietor.

REGENTVILLE ESTATE, near PENRITH.

MORT and CO. have been instructed by the proprietor to sell by public auction, on an early date, in the month of August, of which due notice will be given,
A large portion of the above valuable estate, in the neighbourhood of the Penrith Railway Station.
☞ The commencement of the railway works, near Penrith, and the demand for land in that neighbourhood, has induced the proprietor to decide upon bringing a portion of the Regentville Estate into the market. The beauty of the scenery in the Nepean country, the salubrity of the climate, and the richness of the soil, all combine to render it the most delightful part of the county of Cumberland, only requiring the increased facilities of railway transit to render it one of the most delightful neighbourhoods for a country residence. The completion of the line of rail to Penrith, which has just been commenced under such favourable auspices, may now be looked upon as a matter of only a very short time, and will at once supply the only deficiency—the means of communication with the metropolis in a couple of hours, and the speedy transit of all kinds of produce.
⁂ Full particulars will shortly be advertised.

⁂ These allotments are close to Messrs. Mort and Co.'s Cattle and Sheep Yards, and within a stone's throw of the new station.

GIDEON LANG and WALKER, THE PIONEERS of that part of THE COLONY, chiefly for the RICHNESS OF THE PASTURE, and in order to secure the tracts that were most ABUNDANTLY WATERED. Parties therefore on the look out for FIRST-CLASS FATTENING STATIONS, should bear in mind that these runs were selected by MEN OF GREAT EXPERIENCE, and who, from the fact of their being the first in the field, had the opportunity of SECURING THE PICK OF THE COUNTRY.
The blocks, as enumerated above, generally comprise an area of about 16,000 ACRES EACH, with the exception of a few, where the extent is very much in excess of that quantity

To Close a Partnership.

MORT and CO. have been instructed by the proprietors, in order to close a partnership, to sell by public auction, at the Rooms, Pitt-street, at 11 o'clock, on TUESDAY, 26th July,
That really valuable pastoral property,—
The CHINCHILLA and WONGONGRA RUNS, in the district of Darling Downs.
The CHINCHILLA RUN has a frontage of 25 miles to both banks of the Condamine River, and is also watered by Charley's Creek, the Branch, Rocky, the Cogan, and several other permanent creeks, as well as by Bligh's Lagoon, and various other lagoons and waterholes, yielding a most abundant supply of water in all parts of the run, and in all seasons.
The country is of the most FATTENING DESCRIPTION, consisting chiefly of open box and ironbark forest, interspersed with plains, and abounding in MYALL and SALT BUSH.
THE IMPROVEMENTS on CHINCHILLA are,
A dwelling-house of six rooms, with front and back verandahs, and shingled roof, boarded throughout; detached kitchen of 5 rooms, newly erected, &c.
A store and several men's huts, some of which have been recently erected.

THE WONGONGRA RUN adjoins Chinchilla, the overseer's station upon it being about 40 miles from the head station at Chinchilla.
The country is chiefly of open Box and Ironbark forest, and is all sound first-class sheep country. It is watered by the Wongongra, the Dogwood, and other leading creeks—and also by several large permanent lagoons.
The IMPROVEMENTS are an overseer's cottage of 3 rooms, a store, and men's hut, sheepyards, and stockyard. Also, a horse paddock.
10 OUT STATION HUTS, with permanent yards or hurdles at each.
With the Chinchilla and Wongongra Runs will be sold the following Stock:—

⁂ Stores, implements, four good bullock teams, with drays and gear complete, spring cart, horse dray and harness, and about fifty working and twenty unbroken horses, &c., to be taken at a valuation.
☞ There are now so few good squatting properties offering, and opportunities of securing such, have of late, become so rare, that capitalists in search of investments of this class ought not to lose sight of the present chance, especially as these runs are in the market for positive sale in order to close a partnership.
MORT and CO. would particularly direct attention to the VAST EXTENT of FIRST-CLASS FATTENING COUNTRY, abundantly watered, and therefore all available, and scarcely more than half stocked; its proximity to water carriage, and the great economy in management secured by the runs adjoining. Aware, however, that purchasers seldom entertain so large a speculation without first well informing themselves of the fullest particulars and knowing that these cannot be brought within the limits of an advertisement, they invite an inspection of these runs and stock, for which there is ample time prior to the sale. The party in charge will give every assistance to enable intending purchasers to do so.

The Most Eligible Building Sites in all Goulburn!
P. DIGNAM and CO. have been favoured with instructions from the proprietors to announce for sale by public auction, at their Rooms, Auburn-street, Goulburn, on WEDNESDAY, 3rd August, at 12 o'clock,
The whole of that splendid property situate between, and having frontages to Auburn, Sloane, and Clinton streets, Goulburn, and adjoining the Argyle Mill reserve, subdivided into 130 building allotments.

Sections 3 and 5 front Auburn-street.
Section 11 fronts Sloane-street.
Sections 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 front reserved streets.
A large majority of the allotments have double frontages
The large plan is now on view at the Goulburn Auction Rooms, where lithographs may be obtained on application. With the assistance of one of these, the subdivisions being all distinctly pegged out, intending purchasers will be able to arrive at a far more just estimation of the various lots than the most minute description can give them.
The Town of Goulburn has now acquired so important a commercial position in the colony that the auctioneers feel they are not called upon to eulogise in any way such important and desirable building sites as those offered above. By the joint influence of Railways and Municipal Institutions, its annals for the next few years are bound infallibly to tell of a far more rapid progress than any that has characterised its past career; and the auctioneers are content to leave it to the good sense of the public to judge whether they will ever meet with such another opportunity of investing their money as the Monster Land Sale of the 3rd August next will give.
The proprietors, in order to bring these properties within the reach of all, have decided upon selling on such liberal terms as are a together without precedent here.
Capitalists, Speculators, Mechanics—every man who is anxious to improve his social position—all are urgently called upon to inspect the property carefully before the day of sale, with the assurance that every purchaser will have cause to mark that day with a red letter ever after.
Terms:—25 per cent. cash deposit, and the residue by bills at 3, 6, 9, and 12 months, the two latter bearing 8 per cent. interest.
Plan—On view at the Goulburn Auction Rooms.
Lithographs—Gratis on application.
Title—unexceptionable.

WEDNESDAY, August 3rd.
GOULBURN.
The Argyle Steam Mill, Cottages, Paddock, &c.
P. DIGNAM and CO. have been favoured with instructions from the proprietors to announce for sale by public auction, at their Rooms, Auburn-street, Goulburn, on WEDNESDAY, 3rd August, at 12 o'clock,
The Argyle Steam Mill, Residence Cottages, Paddock, &c., occupying an area of with extensive frontages to Sloane and Auburn streets.
The Mill is a substantial brick building, situated in Sloane street, fitted with a 14 horse-power engine, by Russell, and affording storage of six thousand bushels of wheat.
The Residence is a commodious brick cottage, containing entrance hall, four large rooms, and pantry, and has a roomy verandah, detached kitchen, and laundry. The premises are well-finished throughout, and are in excellent order.
There are also four stone cottages of two rooms each, close to the mill and occupied by the men there employed.
The reservoir is large, and well constructed, and is always well supplied with water.
The Argyle Mill is unquestionably one of the most paying concerns in this district, and in the hands of the present tenant has acquired a vastly increased connection, so much so that it has had to be worked day and night for nine months out of the twelve, to get through the business. From the immense agricultural district of which Goulbourn is the centre, a commodious and efficient mill such as the Argyle is sure to get plenty of work; and when it is borne in mind that every week adds to our agricultural population—that every succeeding season sees thousands of acres of virgin soil put to the plough, it must be patent to every observant mind that the colony of New South Wales offers no fairer field for the miller than the district of Goulburn.
The property now under offer is in full and complete working order, is situated at one of the main entrances of the town, and enjoys an excellent connection. A more favourable opportunity of entering into this lucrative business was never offered to capitalists; and the Auctioneers, in requesting a personal inspection of the property from intending purchasers, have every confidence that a satisfactory impression as to its value and efficiency will be left on their minds
Terms—25 per cent cash deposit, and the residue by bills at one, two, three, and four years, bearing interest at 8 per cent., secured on the property.
Title, unexceptionable.
⁂ The property now yields £600 per annum. The lease of the present tenant will expire in October, 1861.
Plan on view at the Goulburn Auction Rooms.

Newcastle.
MR. ALEXANDER FLOOD is instructed by the proprietor to sell by auction, on the 1st day of August next,
Forty-seven Building Allotments in the city of Newcastle.
The sale will commence at 11 o'clock, on the ground lying between the houses of Mr. Fryar and Mr. Doege, opposite the large brickyard, and very near to Broken-backed Bridge, Lake Macquarie Road, or what is now called Darby-street. When 19 allotments in this block are sold the auctioneer will proceed to Blane-street, where six allotments will be offered; and then to Church and Sydney streets, where 22 allotments will be offered.
All the allotments will be found so centrally situated in the city, that working men, miners, and artizans who purchase, can place themselves in a position to dispose of their labour to the shipping, the corporation, the various coal companies, on the wharves, or to private improvers of the city, and be independent to obtain the highest price.
Newcastle being a healthy and a most central city, these allotments can be made homesteads for the families of gold miners, where they can command all the necessaries, and even the luxuries of life, on the cheapest terms; and possess the advantages of religion, education, and protection.
Parties wishing to possess allotments on elevated ground, unrivalled for the beauty and healthfulness of their situation, could secure the same at the auction.

The house commands most delightful views of the harbour and surrounding scenery; the situation is very healthy, and so elevated as to preclude the possibility of ever being built in or injured in any way from the erection of other houses. The premises are built of stone and brick, cemented on the outside above the basement story; erected by the late Mr. Joffries, of the Customs, for his own residence, in the most substantial manner, and of the very best materials.
A plan will be prepared. Intending purchasers may obtain cards to view. Particulars of title may be learned on application to Messrs. Norton, Son, and Barker, Elizabeth-street.

THE OLD HOUSE IN PARK-STREET.—
To A. B., on Bank Holidays.
We like a snarl as well as any man,
And (save with woman) have one when we can;
But then we pick our time, and never sour
When all agree to spend a festive hour.
But wealthy men, of course, can show their airs,
And plague the world about their bank affairs.
Some "twenty-seven clerks," besides their chief,
For one half-day must never seek relief,
In case A. B. (wishing to cut a dash)
Should draw a cheque for one pound of his cash.
But newspapers, like poems, must be filled
With something from which thoughts can be distilled;
And perhaps the HERALD thought this rich A. B.
Might live to learn the lesson of C. D.,
And hence inserted his said paragraph
For what it might be worth—a sneer or laugh.
And as we never strike a foe when down,
We leave him to his fate. The bank clerks frown,
While we announce our usual bill of fare
Of miscellaneous goods and basket ware.
